GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

Boston Threatened with Another Conflagration.

The Fire Confined to a Portion of State-Street Block.

A Mexican Commission on Rio Grande Outrages at Matamoras.

Serious Complication in the Alabama Legislature.

Sharp Shock of an Earthquake in New-Hampshire.

A FIRE PANIC IN BOSTON.

Threatened Destruction of State-Street Block—Charlestown and Chelsea Fire Companies Summoned—The Fire Controlled.

BOSTON, Nov. 18—11 P. M.—A fire broke out in the middle of State-street Block, at the foot of State-street, about 10 o'clock, and it now looks as if the whole block would be destroyed.

BOSTON, Nov. 18—11¼ P. M.—The Fire Department of Charlestown and Chelsea had been called upon for assistance; but the fire has been confined to one store, and is now under control. Only the north end of the block will probably be destroyed.

BOSTON, Nov. 18—11:40 P. M.—The fire is now under complete control. It is confined to the store of Messrs. Carter, Mann & Co., grocers, No. 207 State-street.

BOSTON, Nov. 18—Midnight.—The fire in the State-street Block has been extinguished. The loss is estimated at from $100,000 to $200,000.

Losses by the Fire.

BOSTON, Nov. 19—1 A. M.—The following are the losses by the fire on the State-street block to-night as near as can be ascertained: Carter, Mann & Co., Nos. 205 and 207, wholesale teas, coffees, and spices, stock valued at $35,000; partial loss; fully insured. The two upper stories were occupied for storage purposes, where the fire is supposed to have originated from crates of crockery stored there from the burnt district.

J. & W. Bird occupied the three lower floors of Nos. 209 and 211; paints and oils; loss not ascertained.

D. Webster, King & Co., manufacturers, had just moved into the fourth story, having been burnt out at the great fire; loss $1,400; no insurance.

The Boston Dye-wood and Chemical Company, also burned out by the big fire, occupied the fifth floor with a new stock, which was badly damaged by water; no insurance.

Danford, Sendder & Co., wholesale grocers, occupying four floors of Nos. 201 and 203; stock badly damaged by water; fully insured.

S. S. Pierce used the fifth floor for the storage of teas and coffees, which was badly damaged by smoke and water; insured.

There was considerable excitement for some time, and large crowds hastened to the scene of the fire, but the firemen and engines were promptly on hand, and soon had everything their own way. Lines of military and police were thrown across the streets to keep back the crowd.

Another Account of the Fire—Fire-Proof Roofs Save the Block.

BOSTON, Nov. 18.—Another large fire has raged in this city this evening, and tested the capacity of the Boston Fire Department severely. The fire broke out at 10¼ in the store of Carter, Mann & Co., wholesale grocers, located in the centre of State-street block. This is the handsomest and most substantial block of granite warehouses in the city, and is occupied by the heaviest merchants of the city, together with some of the United States bonded warehouses. The fire, when discovered, was burning briskly in the two upper stories and broke through the roof before the fire-engines arrived. Four alarms were given, followed by another calling for help from the suburbs, but in spite of all that the firemen could do, the store was completely destroyed. Some of the goods in the lower stories were got out. The fire burned with great fierceness, and illuminated the whole city for nearly an hour. The preservation of the remaining portion of the block, which includes twenty or thirty warehouses in all, was due to the fact that the roof of the building was practically fire proof, and the store of Carter, Mann & Co., No. 207, burned out like a chimney, without igniting the contiguous stores. The adjoining store, No. 205, State-street, was occupied by F. Nickerson & Co., merchants, who were some what damaged by water. Carter, Mann & Co.'s loss is very large. Vast crowds of people witnessed the fire from the surrounding streets and buildings.

MEXICO.

Mexican Commission to Investigate the Rio Grande Outrages.

MATAMORAS, Nov. 18.—Señors Velasco and Carillo, members of the Mexican Commission to investigate frontier outrages, have arrived, accompanied by Señor Silices, Attorney of the Commission. They invite the fullest investigation of the frontier difficulties from Americans as well as Mexicans, and express their determination to sift the whole question and make a full and impartial report to the Mexican Government.

Señor Salindo, the other Commissioner, is temporarily detained at Monterey.

ALABAMA LEGISLATURE.

A Difficulty in Organizing—The Democrats and Republicans form Distinct Organizations.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 18.—The Alabama Legislature convened by law today at 12 o'clock. Lieut.-Gov. Moren, who holds over by the Constitution until his successor is qualified, called the Senate to order in the Senate Chamber. Eighteen Senators were sworn in, and the Senate adjourned.

In the Hall of the House, Mr. Hubbard, the Speaker of the last House, and who holds over by the Constitution until his successor is elected and qualified, called the members to order and called the roll of counties. Forty-five representatives presented themselves and were sworn in. There not being a quorum, the House adjourned until 12 M. to-morrow. All the members in each House who appeared at the Capitol today were Democrats.

The Republicans met at the United States Court-room and organized, with a member of each branch in the chair. This makes two Legislatures in Alabama.

Five Democrats are absent, but will arrive to-night. The three at Marengo, who were arrested yesterday, hold certificates of election, but they have been carried to Mobile. This would make fifty-three Democratic members. In the lower branch fifty-one is a quorum. The Republicans are said to have sworn in fifty-two in their House, claiming and seating three from Marengo and three from Barbour Counties, but who do not hold certificates of election from the Secretary of State. The Democrats from Barbour County who hold certificates, were arrested this afternoon, but they promptly gave bonds to appear at the next term of the United States Court, and were discharged. There is considerable excitement, but no disturbance yet.

A Fatal Abortion Case in Rochester—The Body of the Victim Buried in Canada.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Some excitement was created in this city by the publication of facts which tend to show that the crime of abortion has been committed in this city. Briefly, the circumstances are these: A man named Bender came to this city some weeks ago and engaged board for a young girl named Esther A. Cole, at the house of a woman named Moore, whose reputation is not good. The girl lived only three days. The remains were conveyed to Drummondsville, Ont., at night, and there buried. They have been exhumed, and the disclosure made by a post-mortem examination shows that an abortion of an aggravated nature had been committed. Mrs. Moore, her husband, and servant girl are now under arrest.

EARTHQUAKE.

A Shock Among the Granite Hills of New-Hampshire.

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 18.—A severe shock of earthquake occurred here this afternoon about 2 o'clock. It began with a sort of explosion, followed by trembling and shaking, which lasted about ten seconds. Buildings rocked violently, and the shock was plainly perceptible to people walking in the streets. The shock was distinctly felt, and its apparent course was from the west to east.

The telegraph operators at Contoocook and Warner report the same shock there.

LACONIA, N. H., Nov. 18.—This place was visited by an earthquake at about 2 o'clock this afternoon. The shock lasted about five seconds.

The case of Herron against Wharton, for Secretary of State, has been postponed until to-morrow.

The case of Kellogg against the State Returning Board, of which Gov. Warmoth is President, comes up to-morrow in the United States Court.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS.

He Declines to be Feted, and Remains Away From Quincy Meeting—Speeches Made and Resolutions Adopted.

QUINCY, Mass., Nov. 18.—The fellow-townsmen of Charles Francis Adams—who arrived at his home in this town last week—met at the town hall, this evening, to express their satisfaction with his recent diplomatic achievements, and welcome him back to the town. Mr. Adams refused to appear and be publicly fêted and complimented by his neighbors, and was not present at the meeting. Speeches were made by a number of citizens, and a series of resolutions was adopted, of which the following were the important ones:

Resolved, That we fully recognize the dignified, moderate, and statesmanlike spirit with which, as Minister to England, Mr. Adams represented our country during the memorable war of the rebellion, and we congratulate him upon living to see the wise positions he assumed in the Alabama correspondence accepted by the sober judgment of two great nations.

Resolved, That the services of our distinguished townsman at the Geneva Arbitration fitly concluded that portion of his public career which has grown out of our recent civil disturbances, and we take pride in the thought that his name will forever live in history associated with this eminently wise and Christian settlement of serious international differences.

THE CHEROKEE LAND CASE.

Final Decision by the United States Supreme Court—The Rights of the Purchaser Sustained.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 18.—In the case of Holden vs. Joy, from the Circuit Court for the District of Kansas, which was argued at the last term of the Supreme Court of the United States, an important question is settled by the decision now made. By the treaty of 1835 with the Cherokee Nation, that tribe was ceded the land in question, now forming a part of the State of Kansas, with a provision that in case there ever should be an abandonment of the lands, they should revert to the United States. In 1861 the tribe joined the Confederates, and abandoned the reservation, and thereupon the appellant here and numerous others, construing the treaty for themselves, entered upon the lands and preempted claims, regarding the territory as being again public lands of the United States by reason of the abandonment, and subject to preemption. In 1866 a treaty was made with the tribe, by which it was agreed that these lands should be sold for its benefit, and that it should thereafter relinquish its title thereto. Under this treaty the appellee purchased the lands held by him, paying the stipulated price, and thereupon the question arose whether Holden who had preempted, or Joy, who had purchased, under the circumstances stated, the same land, had the better title, and that question was presented. In this case the Court below sustained the title of Joy, and this Court now affirms the decree in an elaborate opinion, holding in substance that the tribe took title under the treaty of 1835 as a nation, and that this title was not diverted by abandonment unless the clause of forfeiture for that cause was enforced by the United States; that as the United States did not enforce the forfeiture the title remained in the tribe, and could not be impaired by the entry and occupancy of private parties; that the preemption of the land by settlers was void, because the lands were not the public lands of the Government and subject to such entry; that by the treaty of 1866, as supplemented in 1868, the lands became subject to sale as therein agreed, and the appellee purchasing in accordance with its terms became the possessor of a good title to the lands purchased. Mr. Justice Clifford delivered the opinion. This discussion disposes of cases Nos. 327, 328, and of many other claims of a similar character.

Trial for Alleged Frauds on the Government.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 18.—A special term of the United States District Court commenced here today, Judge Lowell presiding, for the trial of the case of the United States against William F. Weld & Co., in which the defendants are charged with defrauding the Government of a large amount of revenue. The amount claimed by the Government is $1,480,000, and the alleged frauds cover a period of upward of five years. District-Attorney Mason, Assistant District-Attorney F. W. Hurd, and Gen. B. F. Butler appeared for the Government, and Hon. E. R. Hoar and Messrs. E. D. Sohier and Richard Olney for the defendants. The case will occupy several days.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Opposition to the Civil Service Rules Developing.

Railway Through the Indian Lands—The Sac and Fox Delegation Ask a Perpetual School Fund for their Children—The Coming Inauguration.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—The signs of the times point to a sharp attack in Congress on the new civil service appointment machinery. There is a class of politicians who have boldly opposed the principle of separating the civil appointments from party influences, and who are earnestly demanding the continuance of the spoils system. They submitted to have reform inserted in the Philadelphia platform and preached during the canvass, but all the time made a mental protest against any reform which should prevent them from rewarding their friends and punishing their enemies by extending or withholding the patronage of the Government. Now that the election is over, increased opposition is arising. It is undoubted that an attempt will be made in Congress to repeal all the legislation there has been on the subject. Just what quarter the proposition will come from is uncertain. The election has rendered the friends of the measure stronger than ever, and they have the advantage of an appeal to the platform on which the party triumphed. The large majorities in several States, instead of being held to be a demand for a great share in the peddling of petty offices, is looked upon as giving the President great freedom and independence, for nowhere can any man be put forward and have his claims presented as the one to whom any particular result ought to be attributed.

THE RAILROAD THROUGH THE INDIAN COUNTRY.

The completion of the railroad through the Indian country, connecting Sedalia, Mo., with Galveston, Texas, affords a line between New-York and Galveston which will require only one change of cars, and that will be at Chicago, from which place Pullman cars will run through. The building of this road is of great importance to the postal service in Texas, and will make necessary a revision of existing mail contracts in that State, and an extensive change in the routes. The mails passing North and South will be almost entirely carried over this road, and the new stage-routes will be made to run East and West, intersecting the railroad. No road has been recently constructed which has so large an influence upon the postal service of any part of the country.

The report will also contain an elaborate statement and discussion of the Indian policy of the Government. The greater part of the copy for the report is now in the hands of the public printer.

RAILWAY POST ROUTES.

The Post-office Department has increased the railway postal service of the country 8,000 miles during the year. This increase has been made under the operation of the law which makes all railroads post routes, and it shows that 8,000 miles of new railroads have been completed during the year.

Under an order from the Board of Public Works, a large force of laborers was placed at work this evening to remove the railroad track running from First-street west to Sixth-street south-west. The horse disease is steadily spreading in Columbus, Ohio, and provision is being made for hauling the fire-engines by hand.

An impromptu subscription was started in the Committee, and in a few minutes about forty of its members subscribed $100,000. This was an entirely spontaneous movement among a few of the Committeemen. It is expected that Philadelphia will subscribe more than the quota allotted to the whole State of Pennsylvania—say about $1,000,000.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 18.—The Centennial Commissioners and Financial Corporators of Tennessee met here today, and organized by appointing Gov. J. C. Brown President, and Col. W. T. Prosser Secretary. GREAT FIRE IN BROOKLYN.

Upward of Half a Million Dollars' Worth of Property Destroyed.

Messrs. Woodruff & Robinson's Warehouses, on Amity-Street, Consumed—Insurances and Casualties.

At about 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, fire was discovered in the elevator department of Woodruff & Robinson's large storage warehouses, at the foot of Amity-street, Brooklyn.

The buildings were five-story brick structures, and were what are ordinarily considered fireproof, covering an area of 130 by 200 feet, Woodruff & Robinson being the lessees, and William Beard the owner. They contained, besides a large quantity of general merchandise, about 600,000 bushels of grain, principally wheat, according to the statement of Mr. Woodruff. Owing to the inaccessible locality of the fire where first discovered, it made considerable headway before any means that might otherwise have proved effective could be brought to bear. The flames spread rapidly through the building, pouring forth great volumes of smoke. Several steam-tugs were soon at contiguous docks, for the purpose of rendering assistance. Their efforts were directed mainly toward protecting the shipping. By the time the Fire Department had got fairly to work, it was evident that the warehouse must be totally destroyed, as the high walls, the windows in which were tightly closed with iron shutters, defied the efforts of the firemen in that direction.

The steam-tug John Fuller exerted its power with two streams, and all the water that could be made to reach the fire had to be thrown over the walls and on the roof. The flames now began to shoot out from under the eaves, and in a few minutes thereafter the conflagration was at its height. The wind was blowing from the river, so that the vessels lying at the piers were not in any immediate danger. Landward the fire was restricted to the warehouses.

At 2½ o'clock a second alarm was sounded, calling reinforcements from other fire districts. At about 3 o'clock the roof fell in with a roar like thunder, causing the piles of grain stored within to shoot out of every opening the fire had made below. Subsequently the alarm was repeated three times, until the companies from the Eastern District were on the ground. The fact that only a light wind was blowing quieted all apprehensions for the safety of the tenement-house blocks in the neighborhood. Just before dark, the walls of Woodruff & Robinson's stores fell inward. No casualties were reported as resulting from the falling masses of brick and mortar. Department "A," situated on Congress-street and the wharf, and which is stored with sugar, was preserved intact. The tug-boats Teno, Babcock, and the Police boat Seneca were present, rendering what service they could. Some of them made fast to the vessels lying at the piers, prepared to tow them out of the reach of danger. It did not, however, become necessary to remove any vessels. At 7 o'clock the fire was still raging, though safely confined to the débris of the ruined warehouses. The stores P and J are entirely destroyed. The only casualty reported occurred a short time after the fire broke out. Terrence Corrigan, aged thirty-five years, residing at No. 98 Amity-street, and who was employed in the warehouses, while trying to escape from the burning building fell from a third-story window, and sustained a fracture of his thigh-bone. He was taken to the Long Island College Hospital.

The origin of the fire is stated in an affidavit made by Michael Early, an employe in the stores. He says he was engaged in oiling the machinery, when he saw oil used on the fly-wheel, and which had flowed from the journals of the wheel, burning on the floor. The woodwork was also on fire. There was no other fire near the place. He was the only person in that part of the building at the time. He immediately reported the fire to Mr. Thomas Foley, the foreman. Mr. Foley confirmed this statement. It is evident that the fire was caused by friction of the machinery, which was running at full speed, the workmen being employed at the time in loading the ship Artist, then lying at the pier.

Mr. Woodruff, of the firm of Woodruff & Robinson, says in his affidavit that the machinery was valued at $50,000, and insured for the full amount in New-York companies. The building he estimates at $150,000, and the grain at $400,000.

Mr. William Beard, the owner of the buildings, estimates his loss at $180,000, insured as follows: Firemen's, $12,500; Merchants', $12,500; Nassau, $10,000; Phœnix, $10,000; Ætna, of Hartford, $10,000; Sterling, $10,000, and another company, name unknown, making Mr. Beard's insurance in all about $80,000, and leaving him to bear a dead loss of about $100,000. The grain and merchandise were owned by different parties, and the insurances could not be stated.

The promptness and activity of the Fire Department are worthy of note. There were eleven engines on the ground. Engine No. 12, John Kelly, foreman, when the third alarm was sounded, left the corner of North Ninth and Second-street, Williamsburg, and in thirty minutes was throwing water on the fire, four miles from the place they started from.

EXTINGUISHING FIRES.

Correspondence Between Gen. Shaler and Mr. Craven Relative to Using the Sea Water for Extinguishing Fires in this City.

The plan suggested by several engineers and others, of utilizing the sea water for the purpose of extinguishing fires in this City, and which, indeed, is but the revival of a scheme often advocated, has been the subject of a correspondence between Gen. Shaler, President of the Board of Fire Commissioners, and Mr. A. W. Craven, Chief Engineer of the old Croton Department.

In his first letter Gen. Shaler asks if, in the event of such a fire threatening this City as recently devastated Boston, is there a sufficient supply of water available to meet the emergency? The Fire Department has material and apparatus sufficient, but if the Croton fails, it is helpless. The hydrants might get frozen up, a dry season might reduce the supply of water, or the street pipes prove too small to supply a sufficient number of steamers, and this they frequently do now. He adds:

One of our steamers discharges from 300 to 400 gallons of water per minute. A fire that would require the services of eight steamers to subdue it, would therefore consume 2,400 gallons per minute, or 1,440,000 gallons per hour, which is greatly beyond the capacity of our supply pipes in some portions of the City to furnish. There are many sections of the City in which a full supply from contiguous hydrants could not be obtained for four steamers. Now, what is the remedy? Shall we furnish new water-pipes and hydrants of greater capacity, and increase the Croton supply? or, shall we avail ourselves of the ocean water which surrounds us? If the latter, are there any engineering difficulties in the way? and what would it cost? Would a stationary engine at the Battery, with one or more auxiliary engines, on each river-bank, up-town, supply the mains and the necessary supply pipes? Would it be practicable and desirable in any case to have all the mains and supply pipes connected? With such a system, could a sufficient head of water be obtained to enable us to dispense with steam fire-engines? Would such a system be positively reliable?

To these questions Mr. Craven replies:

For perfect efficiency in subduing a fire, it is necessary to have at free command the greatest possible quantity of water in the shortest possible time. This is out of the question in the present arrangements for distributing the water through the City. What is the remedy? you ask. First, as to the supply and its source.

"We can assume at once that there will be no "engineering difficulties in the way." Pumping engines could be erected at different points capable of delivering a practically unlimited supply from the inexhaustible source referred to, and the distribution could be arranged for different districts, all or any of which could be connected or disconnected with, or from each other, as emergencies might require. At or near the highest points in their districts, towers might be erected to sustain tanks of such construction, and at such elevation as to enable you to dispense with steam fire-engines in very many cases, and by their aid to make 'such a system positively reliable.'" It is for yourself to show to what extent the cost of maintaining your Department would be reduced by such a system; but without going into a close calculation, I should think that the reduction would be nearly, if not quite, equal to the interest on the amount necessary to construct the works."

The first letter of Gen. Shaler to Mr. Craven was written last Winter; and since the fire in Boston he has again addressed that gentleman, and requested him to mature the plan suggested and submit the result at the earliest practicable moment.

Approaching Arrival of Five Hundred Jewish Families from Roumania.

A meeting will be held, this evening, in the Synagogue Bnai Jeshurun, West Thirty-fourth-street, to make arrangements for receiving about 2,000 Jews who are about to emigrate from Roumania to this country. Rabbi H. Vidaver, M. Strasburger, and many prominent Israelites are taking great interest in the movement. At the last advices 500 families had resolved to leave Roumania for New-York, and, as no society has been formed to assist the emigrants, they will pay their own expenses. The majority of the men may be classed as skilled mechanics; the whole of them are thriving and industrious.

ANOTHER POLICE RAID.

Concert-Saloon Keepers Arrested on Broadway—Some of the Saloons Remaining Open—Woods' Lottery Scheme Again Visited.

As intimated by the TIMES yesterday morning, the keepers of the Broadway concert-saloon dens arrested by the Police on Saturday night, determining to test the legality of the action, opened their establishments last night. Superintendent Kelso, anticipating that such would be the case, issued instructions to arrest them. As on Saturday night, several of the men arrested as keepers of the dens claimed that they were merely employes. Capt. Clinchy, of the Fourteenth Precinct, determined to arrest every bar-tender and employe in every concert saloon found open. On the other hand, the concert-saloon keepers, anticipating probable arrest, ordered the waiter girls to discard the semi-nude costume heretofore adopted by them, and wear ordinary walking-dresses. Capt. Clinchy, with Capt. McCullogh, of the Eighth Precinct, at 11 o'clock made the raid. In the City Garden, No. 82 Prince-street, they arrested the proprietor, Philip Martin, and his bar-tenders. In the Canterbury, Frederick Hughes was arrested, the other partner, Elisha J. Gregory, not being in the saloon. In the Museum, No. 602 Broadway, Henry J. Walsh, proprietor, and John J. Gillott, bar-tender, were arrested. In the Dew Drop In, No. 556 Broadway, Richard Campbell, proprietor, was arrested. Moritz Brockman, proprietor of the Boulevard Hall, on the second floor of No. 632 Broadway, was arrested. He also keeps a den known as "The Dolly Varden," at No. 91 Bowery. In the New Idea Saloon, No. 598 Broadway, Daniel Perkins, proprietor, and Oscar Mulliken, bar-tender, were arrested. Perkins, about two months ago, shot and killed Edward Wellington, alias "Indian Ned," a Broadway gambler. In the Assembly Saloon, on the second floor of No. 636 Broadway, the bar tender, John Jameson, was arrested. The waiter-girls were not arrested, but allowed to go home. The saloons were then closed. Altogether, between the concert saloon keepers and bar-tenders, there were twenty-five arrests made during the raid in the Fourteenth Precinct. The prisoners were locked up in the Mulberry-street Station, and will be arraigned before Justice Hogan, at the Tombs, this morning.

In the Eighth Precinct, Capt. McCullogh arrested Benjamin Heath, keeper of the Alexis Saloon, at No. 603 Broadway. Capt. McCullogh also made a raid on the disorderly houses Nos. 112 and 114 Greene-street, and arrested the keepers, Louise Fran and Drury L. Lumsden. They will be arraigned at Jefferson Market.

In the Fifteenth Precinct, Capt. Byrnes, acting on a warrant issued by Judge Cox on complaint of Charles Forst, of No. 69 Third-street, made a descent on the gift concert concern of George Woods, at No. 656 Broadway, and arrested Woods and fifteen clerks, who were locked up on a charge of being concerned in an illegal lottery scheme. The concert saloons in the Fifteenth Precinct, such as "The Branch," "The Pavilion," and "Arion," were not raided on, and were open as usual.

Dinner of the Alumni of the Medical Department of the University of New-York.

The social gathering of the Alumni of the medical department of the University of New-York at their annual dinner last evening was remarkable for the bonhomie, earnestness, and high professional standing of those who were present, from Dr. Leaming, who presided, to the youngest graduate. The medical graduates of the University are in high glee over the recent election of Dr. D. B. St. John Roosa to a seat in the University Council, this being the first time the medical department has ever been represented in that body. In the many able and energetic speeches made during the evening, this event was invariably alluded to as a cause for triumph and congratulation. One and all looked upon Dr. Roosa's election as the commencement of a new era in the history of the department, and bore unqualified testimony to his high professional attainments. Dr. Crosby, Chancellor of the University, said that he had long wished to see medical science have its due share of representation in the Council; that he had labored to that end; that he heartily welcomed Dr. Roosa, and trusted that he was only the avant courier of others of his profession, who should in turn join and aid him. Dr. Leaming made an earnest appeal to the Alumni to support this their fundamental principle, and was greeted with enthusiastic applause throughout his speech.

The Chairman then gave the following toasts:

The Relief Movement on the West Side.

The work of relieving the poor on the west side of the City, under the management of the St. John's Guild, is making rapid progress. Many families were visited and relieved yesterday.

Last evening, about fifty ladies assembled at the head-quarters of the Guild, for the purpose of making wearing apparel. These meetings will continue twice weekly throughout the Winter. The Guild has had work that would employ 200 women offered by a leading firm in this City, which it would be able to accept if it had 100 sewing-machines. The funds of the Guild do not warrant the outlay at present, but it is hoped some firm or firms will soon come forward and present the organization with the required number of machines.

The Gale in Denmark—Great Loss of Life.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 18.—Advices from the provinces show that the destruction caused by the hurricane is enormous. At many ports the sea embankments and draining works have been demolished. The loss of life is very great. The damage done in the Island of Falster, known for its fertility as the Orchard of Denmark, will exceed a million rix-dollars. The King has sent relief to the inhabitants, and the Queen heads subscription lists and presides over an aid association. The Minister of Marine has ordered the commandants of Danish vessels and naval stations to give every succor to the shipwrecked crews along the coast.

Animated Debate in the Assembly on Radical Tendencies—M. Thiers on His Metal.

VERSAILLES, Nov. 18.—In the Assembly today there was an exciting debate over the motion of Deputy Changarnier censuring M. Gambetta for his inflammatory speeches in the Provinces. On making his motion, M. Changarnier complained of the increasing audacity of the Radicals, and the laxity of the Government in dealing with them. He accused Gambetta of entertaining and seeking to spread socialistic ideas.

This charge created much excitement in the Chamber, and the speaker was called to order.

The Deputies on the Right tried to provoke Gambetta to reply, but he declined and only shrugged his shoulders.

President Thiers mounted the tribune in defense of the Government. He protested against being placed at the bar as a criminal, and threw out the intimation that he might appeal to the country. He admitted that the speech made by M. Gambetta at Grenoble was offensive, but claimed that the Government was not responsible. The President concluded by demanding a vote of confidence from the House.

Deputy Mettetal moved that the vote of confidence be immediately taken.

The Assembly stubbornly refused to give priority to M. Mettetal's motion, but after four divisions of the Chamber on other motions, the vote of confidence came up, and was adopted by 267 yeas against 117 nays.

Half of the Deputies abstained from voting.

Mr. Bright to Resume His Seat in Parliament Next Session—The Hyde Park Fenian Amnesty Meeting—Insubordination in the London Police.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Right Hon. John Bright will resume his seat in Parliament at the coming session.

Mr. Bailey, one of the speakers at the Fenian amnesty demonstration at Hyde Park on Sunday, the 3d inst., was fined last week for infringing the regulations for the protection of the public parks. His counsel contended that the regulations were not valid, because Parliament has not sanctioned them, and an appeal was taken to a higher Court.

At meetings held in Greenwich and Clerkenwell, yesterday, resolutions were adopted condemning the action of the Government in prosecuting the Hyde Park speakers.

Eighty members of the London Police force have been discharged from the service for insubordination. The trouble grew out of the dismissal of a constable who acted as secretary during an effort of the force to secure an increase of pay.

Arrest in Connecticut for Improper Use of the Mails.

From the New-Haven Palladium, Nov. 18.

Some days ago, United States Marshal Carl became aware that the United States mails were being used to convey obscene prints and books. Many of these appeared to be mailed in Stamford, and an investigation proved that there were New-York parties carrying on the business there. Mr. Carl went to Stamford Friday, and arrested Joseph A. Morris. He was brought to this city, and is now in confinement awaiting examination before the United States Commissioner. It appears that this business has been driven out of New-York by the prosecutions of a society formed to prevent the spread of obscene literature. They have gone into adjoining States, some of them having come into this State. Morris was sending every day large quantities of the books through the mails, most of them going, as it appeared by the investigations, to boarding schools of both sexes. To prevent detection the works were inclosed in the outside pages of pamphlets, books, and were in blank sheets also. In Stamford a large amount of the villainous matter was found, and it is thought that something like thirty tons of the stuff have been distributed from this, and, perhaps, other sources. Morris will be brought before a Commissioner, probably Johnson T. Platt, today.

Fatally Poisoned by a Diseased Horse.

From the Rondout Freeman, Nov. 18.

A man by name of Becker, who resides near Quarryville, in this county, owned a couple of horses that had the distemper. In cleaning out the mangers, the other day, the virus came in contact with a flesh-wound on his hand. In a short time his hand and arm became so terribly inflamed and swollen, they had to be amputated. Soon after the amputation he died. Persons owning horses cannot exercise too much prudence in this respect, as the matter from this distemper is rank poison to the human system.

STREET OPENINGS.

Interesting Correspondence on the Operations of this Bureau.

Mr. George H. Purser Stops the Work of Improvement—Inquiries by Property-Owners—Mr. Green Replies and Gives Mr. Purser's Record.

Barely a week has passed since the TIMES drew the attention of the public to the evident and gross frauds which appeared in the operations of the City "Bureau of Street Openings," and already there has poured in from property-owners whose interests were affected, and who for years past have had patiently to bear the heaviest extortions of the "Commissioners" charged with these openings, innumerable letters and statements, which amply justify the suspicions which were expressed in regard to the management of this "Bureau." From official sources we have other and more explicit evidence to the same effect. It is needless to say that in the times of Mr. Tweed and Controller Connolly all bills of "expenses" connected with the work of the Bureau were, as the records of the Controller's office demonstrate, "paid with exceptional promptness and completeness." The inference is fair from this premiss, that the protests of aggrieved property-owners were treated with quiet contempt. Such, indeed, appears to have been the case; but of late some of these gentleman began to move in the matter with better hopes of success, and from this late effort ensued a correspondence between Controller Green and William R. Martin, Esq., the President of the West-side Association, the principal portions of which are subjoined.

The letter of Mr. Martin was addressed to the Controller on the 7th of August last. It was evoked by a letter, which had then recently appeared in the newspapers, from Mr. George H. Purser, clerk of the Street-opening Commissioners to Corporation Counsel O'Gorman, in which the writer announced the discharge of the various clerks and copyists employed in the Bureau, and the stoppage of the numerous proceedings for street-openings then pending. Mr. Martin quotes the material points of the letter, and adds:

"The owners in the localities where the property affected by these proceedings and the others proposed, is situated are greatly concerned to have them prosecuted with greater dispatch, and more than has been the usual practice, and will be greatly inconvenienced by the interruption of all proceedings in the pending improvements." The gentlemen he represents, Mr. Martin concludes, "look to you with great confidence to do all in your power to remove the present obstacles to the prompt performance of this work in the future."

To this letter Mr. Green replied by the communication given below, but which will probably be better understood if preceded by a few extracts from the letter of Mr. Purser, referred to in the correspondence. This communication is addressed to Mr. O'Gorman, and dated No. 32 Nassau street, July 29. Mr. Purser says:

"On the 1st of August next, I have concluded to discharge the clerks and copyists now employed by me in the business of opening streets, avenues, and public places, and shall hereafter be unable to proceed with or complete any of the numerous proceedings now in my hands, a statement of which is annexed. Andrew H. Green, Esq., Controller, has refused to pay any of the costs, charges, and expenses taxed and allowed in reports confirmed more than a year since, although he has paid the awards for land, and the assessments are principally collected. The whole expense of conducting these proceedings, including clerks, copyists, rent, and fuel, has been exclusively paid out of my private means, and I have neither the ability nor the disposition to make further advances."

The proceedings for widening Broadway, he proceeds, and acquiring land for the Riverside Park originated some four years since, and the voluminous report made to the Supreme Court by the first Commissioners were referred back for amendment, and were amended, and the final report had been submitted a few days before. These proceedings were very important, the duties they devolved upon the Bureau extremely onerous and costly, but notwithstanding this Mr. Purser had received nothing for his outlays and services, and he adds:

"Although the costs, charges, and expenses will be legally payable in four months, the Finance Department may again assume the right to contest their payments. * * * Under the circumstances stated, and the discourteous refusal of the Controller to answer respectful and repeated inquiries on the subject, made within the last twelve months, I have resolved to make no further outlay.

Will you have the kindness to communicate the contents of this letter to Geo. M. Van Nort, Esq., Commissioner of Public Works, and to the Commissioners of the Department of Public Parks, and explain to property-owners interested in pending public improvements why all progress is interrupted for the present? The responsibility is with the Finance Department, for no reason exists why I should continue to exhaust my private fortune in the conduct of public business, however important."

It was Mr. Purser's misfortune that the books in the Controller's office give the most complete and damaging record of the operations of the Bureau to which he was clerk; and the result of the investigation instituted by Mr. Green appears in the following interesting communication:

CITY OF NEW-YORK, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE,
CONTROLLER'S OFFICE, New-York, Aug. 26, 1872.

Wm. R. Martin, Esq., President of "The West-side Association":

DEAR SIR: I have read yours of the 7th inst., stating that "a letter dated 29th July, 1872, addressed by Geo. H. Purser, Esq., Clerk of the Commissioners, &c., &c., to Richard O'Gorman, Esq., Counsel to the Corporation, has been by him made public," and that it "announces the discharge of the clerks and copyists employed in that office in the business of opening streets, avenues, and public places," and adds "that no further progress will be made in the numerous proceedings for street openings now pending."

After intimating the concern of the property-holders at this state of things, you are kind enough to express confidence that my exertions will be in the direction of increasing the facilities for the prompt performance of this class of service in future. Representing, as you do, a very numerous body of holders of property in that portion of the City where many of these street openings are now, and have been for several years, going on, I am glad of the opportunity to lay before you and them such information as I have on the subject of the letter of Mr. Purser to the Counsel to the Corporation, a copy of which I have obtained from the newspapers.

I reply to you directly, as it is difficult to know exactly who is responsible for Mr. Purser's letter and its publication. It is addressed to the Counsel to the Corporation, by him sent to the Commissioner of Public Works, and shortly after it appears in print. By this letter it appears that upon the pretext that no satisfactory reply could be obtained from this office respecting the payment of certain bills of costs of street openings, therefore Mr. Purser proposes to discharge clerks, &c., and to stay the proceedings now pending.

Although I was aware that Mr. Purser sustained many characters, as that of Chief of what is called the Bureau of Street Openings in the office of the Counsel to the Corporation, and also that of landlord, receiving the room rent, I was not aware that as clerk of probably twenty Commissions, he was vested with authority to direct what proceedings on the part of the City should be proceeded with or stayed.

Lest I might have unintentionally omitted some duty in respect to the payment of bills connected with the proceedings for street openings, I caused search to be made in this office to ascertain what bills, if any, of this description, remain unpaid. The investigation so made has satisfied me that this class of claims were, prior to my coming into office, paid with exceptional promptness and completeness.

At the date of your letter there were but three bills of costs for street openings remaining unpaid. These are:

First—For widening Broome-street.

Second—For taking Public-place at Sixty-sixth-street and Boulevard.

Third—For widening Broadway, (first bill of costs.)

The first of these bills is for taking a small strip of land, 17 feet 9 inches in width by 125 feet in length, thereby widening 125 feet of Broome-street on one side only, being part of the block between Wooster and Laurens streets. It amounts to $18,859 23, of which $3,600 is for the fees of Mr. Grats Nathan and others as Commissioners, although the legal fees of these Commissioners by the laws of 1862, cannot in all exceed $37 50; $6,462 61 is for the fees of Michaels and Melendy, Surveyors; $1,640 for Geo. H. Purser, as clerk to Commissioners, and for drafting and copying report; the balance, $7,167 67, is for advertising, stationery, room rent, &c. Thus the mere clerical and bureau cost of these proceedings is $150 80 per running foot of street widening. This must not be mistaken for the cost of the land acquired: it is merely the expense of taking it.

The second of the above bills is for the costs of taking a small triangle at Sixty-sixth-street and Boulevard, and reached this office but sixteen days before Mr. Purser's letter was published. The third and only other unpaid bill found in this office is that for the first proceedings for widening Broadway, from Thirty-fourth to Fifty-ninth streets. These proceedings, it will be recollected, were set aside by the Legislature and by the Courts, on account of fraud, shortly after the time of the decease of Mr. Watson. The bill has been lying some time in the office, because there was not power vested by law in this Department to raise a cent to pay it, even supposing it to be correct in every particular. This fact is well known to both Mr. Purser and Mr. O'Gorman.

Mr. Purser says "the costs, charges, and expenses will be legally payable in four months." Four months from when? from the confirmation of the report? If so, there is but one bill due at this date, and that is in the Broome-street case, which seemed to me so very exorbitant and objectionable that I did not, and do not, feel justified in paying it. My convictions respecting this bill have the concurrence of the emphatic protest of the property-holders affected.

From these details you will be able to see what ground there is for allegations of delay in the payment of this class of claims. The charge is wholly groundless. The true reason for Mr. Purser's alarm is very different from what appears on the face of his letter.

The examination of these claims, paid and unpaid, confirms impressions that I have long held, in common with the whole community, respecting them. They have been a prominent subject of complaint in your own Association for years, and in its printed proceedings may be found these very decided remarks relative to them:

"They have been made the instruments of one of the most oppressive forms of taxation under which property-owners in this abused City have had to suffer. Originally framed for an honest purpose, and in earlier and better years found quite sufficient to open a street across the whole island, from river to river, at a cost of $2,000 or $3,000, a malignant ingenuity has found means under them, in later years, of making it cost twice that sum to open a street through a single block. * * *

But the abuses are not necessarily to be done in the names of the Commissioners themselves. Next are let in upon us a horde of surveyors, clerks, assistants, appraisers, posters, printers, and other agents. * * * No surveying whatever is needful to be done, or, in fact, usually is done, for every lot, plot, and gore has already been carefully surveyed and mapped at the City's expense. And I think it is not within the memory of man that a bill, when [illegible], however enormous the objections urged against it, ever underwent a pruning. [illegible] in New-York [illegible] has become one of the [illegible] yet developed by corrupt official working."

The determination on the part of property-owners to rid their property of these enormous expenses, forms a continuous chain of emphatic protests during the last five years.

A table annexed to this shows the costs and expenses of these proceedings for two years only—1870 and 1871—amounting in all to the sum of $621,230 14. All of these, it is believed, with but a single exception, were allowed by one of the two Judges, who do not now exercise judicial functions, and all have been paid, except the three above mentioned, and perhaps a trifle of one or two others. This one exception was in the proceedings to take the triangle at Sixty-sixth-street and Boulevard, which was allowed by Judge Brady, and it is the only case yet in the office, that I am aware of, where the healthy provisions of the act of 1862 have been applied.

In the Sixty-sixth-street case, which was a much more difficult one than the Broome-street case, the fees of the three Commissioners taken together amounted to $31 80, or $10 60 for each. I find among the Commissioners in this proceeding your own name, and I think I am correct in saying that you assumed the duty in the interests of the property-owners, in order that the law might for once be applied to this class of expenses, and the result is a bill of costs, so far as the Commissioners' fees are concerned at least, to which no exception can be taken, and which will serve as a guide hereafter.

I have asked the Counsel to the Corporation to inform me what proceedings are now pending and unfinished in his office, when they were commenced, and who are the Commissioners. As soon as I get this information, I can better determine as to the proper course to complete these proceedings, which it is intimated in your letter will hereafter make no further progress. I am advised that the Department of Public Parks have under the law the authority, over these proceedings, so far as they affect property above Fifty-ninth-street, and I have no doubt that the owners of property can apply with confidence to that Department to facilitate them, and to keep the expenditures within reasonable limits. The costs in the Broadway widening and Riverside Park, which proceedings originated some four years since, Mr. Purser says, will be legally payable in four months. The Finance Department "might again assume the right to contest their payment." From this it is made clear that the real trouble is not, after all, so much that payment has been refused as that it may hereafter be refused. Mr. Purser says the Finance Department "may assume to contest" the payment "of costs in the Riverside Park case and in the Broadway widening case. It is a consciousness that the end of these enormous and unjustifiable costs has arrived that has led to the determination to break up business and discharge clerks, copyists, &c. Those heretofore in charge of the Finance Department must have entirely agreed with Mr. Purser that there was "no reason why he should continue to expend his private fortune in the conduct of the public business," as they were induced to pay him, as the records of this Department show they did the modest sum of $88,629 as clerk, &c., in the years 1870 and 1871. For the five years, 1866 to 1871, the sum of $159,611 62 was paid to Mr. Purser directly in these proceedings, in one capacity and another. But that you may clearly see the enormity of the system which has been in operation, let me select a few examples from the table of costs paid in 1870 and 1871:

	Commissioner's Fees.	Surveyor's Fees.	Clerk's Fees.	Draft'g & Copying Reports.
Widening Laurens-street from Canal-street to Waverley-place	$28,500 00	$50,295 32	$11,750	$22,100 00
Extending Lexington-avenue from 66th to 97th streets	22,500 00	22,680 83	7,250	5,953 00
Opening Morning side Park	22,500 00	51,923 10	6,450	32,909 50
Widening and extending Park-place from College-place to West-street	15,500 00	14,733 18	4,500	6,849 80
Laying out Public-place, 63d-street and Boulevard	2,250 00	5,158 50	750	3,988 70
Widening and opening 122d, 123d. and 127th streets	7,500 00	9,686 89	2,000	4,381 00
Total	$98,750 00	$154,477 82	$32,700	$76,182 00

Four items in these six proceedings show a total of $362,109 82.

Then, again, the first bill of costs in the Broadway widening case was $165,632 40, of which there is charged for Jas. Hennessy and others Commissioners' fees, $42,000, which under the statute of 1862 cannot be over $2,191 80:

John A. Bagley, for Surveyor's fees	$58,969 35
George H. Purser, Clerk	8,000 00
George H. Purser, for copying report	26,543 00
George H. Purser, for room rent	500 00

Is this Broadway matter one of the cases that justify the statements in Mr. Purser's letter to Mr. O'Gorman, or is it one in which any fair-minded man would say the payment not only ought to be delayed but defeated?

If we look at the names of the Commissioners generally heretofore appointed to conduct these cases, do we, except in some instances, when the stream of public indignation has been turned upon it, find the names of solid, substantial business men, or those of incompetent favorites and tools of the ruling spirits of the time?

The general impression is that the sums paid to commissioners and surveyors and clerks have been illegal, oppressive, and extortionate, and if those receiving them are the clerks, &c., whom we are told are to be discharged, it will be so much the better for all concerned.

It is to be hoped that good results will follow the bringing this subject before the public, that the oft-repeated efforts to stop these abuses will no longer prove unavailing, and that means will be taken to reduce these charges and keep them within the law. To this end the Controller will use all the power the law gives him, and I am sure, in this effort, he will have your co-operation as well as that of the numerous and influential members of your Association.

With very great respect,

ANDREW H. GREEN, Controller.

HEAVY SMUGGLING.

Extensive Seizure of Lace Shawls and Diamonds.

Recently it came to the knowledge of Custom-house officials that a lot of lace shawls, belonging to Henry W. Ducker, and placed in the auction-store No. 122 Duane-street for sale, had been attached by certain parties for debt. Ducker was known by the Custom-house officials to be an expert smuggler, and connected with a number of smuggling schemes. He was imprisoned in Jersey City Jail on a charge of smuggling laces from the steamer Abyssinia. When it became known that Ducker had lace shawls at No. 122 Duane-street for sale, Deputy Surveyor Kirk captured the entire lot. They were brought to the Seizure Department of the New-York Custom-house yesterday, and their value ascertained to be $10,000.

Several small seizures of diamonds have been made recently by the Custom-house officials from registered letters in the New-York Post-office. These letters came from Europe in the regular way through the mails, addressed to jewelers on this side, who, when called upon in reference to the matter, asserted either that they did not know who sent them, or that they shipped them in this way to avoid paying the heavy charges for freight and insurance. In either case, of course, they disclaimed any intention of smuggling. Recently Deputy Collector Phelps ascertained that a large quantity of diamonds were being illegally brought into the country in this manner, and visiting the New-York Post office, succeeding in capturing a package in a registered letter containing cut stones to the value of $31,000. Mr. Phelps reported them to the District-Attorney yesterday for prosecution.

Dutch Heinrich and Rosenzweig Granted New Trials.

In Supreme Court, General Term, yesterday, Judge Ingraham and Judges Larned and Leonard on the Bench, appeals were argued in the cases of Rosenzweig, convicted of malpractice; Charles Moore, convicted of constructive larceny; Vogt, the alleged Belgian murderer and thief, and several others convicted of State Prison offenses. In the case of Henry Newman alias Dutch Heinrich, convicted of grand larceny, the Court reversed the judgment and ordered a new trial on the ground that at the trial Recorder Hackett erred in striking out the evidence of the prisoner, and in instructing the jury to disregard his evidence. By this decision it is laid down as criminal law that where a party on trial avails himself of the recent statute allowing an accused to be a witness in his own behalf, he is not disqualified to testify by reason of a former conviction of felony.

The appeal in the case of Rosenzweig was based on several exceptions of counsel for defendant, both as to the improper admission of testimony and error in the charge. Among these were: There was no evidence that Miss Bowlsby was enceinte; there was error in charging the jury that they could not convict of a lesser crime; that there was error in holding that the onus was on the defendant to prove that malpractice was necessary to preserve the life of the mother; that evidence was improperly admitted to contradict the testimony of the defendant on a collateral matter.

The Court held the errors to be fatal, and reversed the judgment, ordering a new trial.

The Discriminating Duty on Goods Imported in French Vessels—Letter from Secretary Fish.

The following communication was received yesterday by the Chamber of Commerce from the Secretary of State in regard to the time when the discriminating duty shall be applied on goods imported in French vessels from other places than French ports:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, Nov. 16, 1872.

George Wilson, Esq., Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of New-York, New-York:

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 8th inst., transmitting to this Department, in accordance with instructions, certain resolutions adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of New-York, at its meeting held on the 7th of this month, in regard to the time when the discriminating duty established by the recent proclamation of the President shall be applied to merchandise imported into the United States from French vessels, from other than French ports, and requesting that said discriminating duty be not applied to goods afloat at the date of said proclamation.

The matter having been submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for his consideration, I have now to inform you that it is stated in a letter from that officer, under date of the 13th inst., that the most favorable construction which can be given to the Proclamation, or to the law under which it is issued, forbids the exemption of goods afloat Oct. 30, 1872, the date of said Proclamation, from the discriminating duty accruing upon their importation in French vessels arriving on or after that date from countries other than France; that the act of May 24, 1828, which governs the subject, expressly declares that the suspension of discriminating duties therein provided for shall "continue so long as the reciprocal exemption of vessels belonging to citizens of the United States and their cargoes as aforesaid shall be continued and no longer;" that the reciprocity in the present case was terminated by an act of the French Government passed Jan. 30, and published Feb. 3, 1872, and that strictly speaking, therefore, the discriminating duty in question might have been held to apply from and after the last-mentioned date instead of that fixed by the proclamation, to all goods arriving in the manner aforesaid in any port of the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury further adds that, in view of the circumstances above enumerated, it is not seen how the application contained in the resolutions referred to can be complied with. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, HAMILTON FISH.

A Strange Story Relative to a Drowned Woman.

The nude body of a young woman was found floating off the west shore of Governor's Island four days ago, and taken to the Morgue. The face was completely eaten away, and other prominent portions of the body were similarly disfigured. The teeth were all gone, and the bone of the jaw presented the appearance of the teeth having been knocked out. Deputy Coroner Cushman and Dr. Vandewater proceeded to the Morgue, and made a post-mortem examination. They found the lungs full of water, and sea-sand in the trachea. The organs of the body were in a healthy and fully-developed condition, and there was not the slightest indication that the woman's death had resulted from violence. Her age seemed to be about twenty-two years. A gentleman named Stanton, residing at No. 96 Hewes-street, Williamsburg, called on Coroner Keenan, and stated that on the 23d of last month his daughter left home, and had not been seen by him since. He viewed the body, and was convinced that it was that of his daughter.

The Jumel Case to be Tried by a Struck Jury.

Judge Shipman, of the United States Circuit Court, yesterday issued an order in the celebrated case of George Washington Bowen vs. Nelson W. Chase, providing that the cause be tried by a special jury to be struck as follows: The Clerk shall select the names of forty-eight persons who shall be deemed most disinterested. The defendant or his attorney shall then strike out one of the names, and the plaintiff or his agent shall then strike out another, and so on until each party shall have stricken out twelve names. The twenty-four persons remaining shall then be summoned as the jurors, and from this number the twelve jurors shall be drawn from the wheel in the usual way. The case is to be called on the first Monday in December.

MONDAY, Nov. 18—P. M.

The Wall-street markets are dull today. The sales of gold are a fraction lower than on Saturday, and speculation in the Gold Room somewhat tame. The sales of the day are at 113¼@113⅜@113¼@113⅜ ℘ cent. The export demand has ceased, and the Customs demand is barely equal to the payments out of the Treasury on Gold Interest account. The Cash Gold is easy for delivery.

In Foreign Exchange the feeling is dull and the rates a shade easier for buyers than at the close of last week. London, 60 days, quoted at 108¼@108⅜ ℘ cent., with a variety of Bills pressed on the market. The signs are that further loans of Exchange have been made on Stock collateral, and this class of Bills coming in competition with Cotton Bills from the South, in the open market, sensibly affect the rates. The sight rates on London are also easier, 110@110¼ ℘ cent. The difference against the long-sight Exchange is still wider than the price for Money in London would authorize.

The rates for Money to the Stock Brokers are 7 ℘ cent. and a small bonus, or else 7 ℘ cent Gold Interest. The supply of balances on these terms is fair, but the market cannot be called easy even on demand loans, while the discount on first-class paper, outside of Bank, ranges from 9 to 12 ℘ cent.

On the Stock Exchange, the Public Funds of the United States are firm, and the Southern State Bonds and Railway Mortgages barely steady. The Speculation in the Railroad and Miscellaneous Shares is moderately active. The early sales were at rather stiffer figures than at the close on Saturday, but we remark that, with some few special exceptions, there is a notable absence of buoyancy. Western Telegraph, Pacific Mail, and Erie were the apparent leaders today, while North-west Common was bid up, without calling out much Stock, to 84½ ℘ cent. The Shares of the United States Express made a large advance, or, rather, recovery, to 78½ ℘ cent. At the close of the day, the following quotations were made on the General Market, as compared with Saturday afternoon:

We notice with much pleasure the return to the United States of Mr. W. W. Murphy, our former, (and during our War times most efficient,) Consul-General, at Frankfort, Germany. His present visit to this country is on behalf of the suffering holders of Bonds of the State of Georgia, issued for Railroad improvements, whose claims have been recently refused full recognition in Georgia. As the steps which he will take in this behalf have been misrepresented, we give place to the following note from Mr. Murphy himself.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I have just read in the Herald of 14th, a statement copied from a Georgia paper to the effect that the repudiated Georgia bonds are to be resurrected, and a powerful effort made to reverse the verdict of repudiation, and that an agent fully accredited has left Frankfort-on-the-Main, who will be reinforced in New-York, and if a million or so spent will give life to the $9,000,000 repudiated, the money will be forthcoming to control the votes. Permit me to say that I am the agent sent here by the unfortunate holders, in Germany, of the two and a half million dollars' repudiated bonds of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad, to look after their interests. No money has been raised with a view to influence the votes of the Legislature of Georgia, nor is any effort to be made for that purpose. The only money raised was about $4,000 or $5,000 to employ counsel in the foreclosure proceedings of the mortgage bonds. It is to be hoped the Legislature of Georgia will be influenced by the justness of the case to retract their vote of repudiation, which is a great stain upon the honor of the State.

WM. W. MURPHY.

The public are notified that forged Bonds on the Union Pacific Road, of the Income class bearing 10 ℘ cent. Interest, have been discovered, and so well executed that some of the forged Coupons were paid, in mistake, in September, before the fraud was discovered.

Attention is called to the card of the North British and Mercantile Insurance Company, in today's paper, which indicates the strength and resources of the Company after passing through two such conflagrations as Chicago and Boston within thirteen months, and reflects credit on the management.

WHOLESALE PRODUCE MARKET.

Our quotations are the wholesale prices paid for sound merchantable Produce in good clean packages.

BUTTER—The receipts have been 10,255 pks. for the past three days; and 21,053 pks. for the week. There has been a pretty fair inquiry noted, in a jobbing way, for the finer makes, wanted for the local and near by trade, prices of which have shown comparative steadiness, but the general market has been wholly devoid of animation, though holders have been accommodating in their views on other than the choicest grades of stock. The West is supplying this market with very little of marketable goods at present. The current arrivals consist mainly of State product: Best Northern Fall made Welsh dairies have been quoted at 30c.@32c., with choice half-firkins at 32c.@34c. The pick of Western dairies at 23c.@25. There has been very little call for export account from any source, and the bids of shippers have been generally low and unsatisfactory. The week's exports were only 690 pks., all told. The receipts since Jan. 1 have been 580,[illegible] pks., against 591,[illegible]00 pks. same time in 1871; exports, 4,302,649 lbs., against 6,606,673 lbs. same time in 1871. We quote:

State pails, common to extra fine, ℘ lb.	[illegible]@33
State firkins and half-firkins, ℘ lb.	29 @33
State tubs, good to prime, ℘ lb.	26 @34

Grease Butter, original pkgs.	7½@ 8½

CHEESE—The receipts during the past three days have been 3,717 boxes, and the week, 22,047 boxes. The demand has been very moderate for most descriptions, for shipment, as well as home use, on the basis of about previous quotations. The principal holders have been unwilling to make important concessions on the finer makes, and shippers have been reluctant to operate to any considerable extent at asking rates. Medium and low grade stock, especially the latter, has been in rather more favor with buyers at the current figures. Producers in the interior are yet confident in their views and adhere to former rates, but are moving very little stock. The trade here, as well as the shipping interest, show distrust and operate very cautiously. The week's exports were 11,993 boxes. The receipts here since Jan. 1 have been 1,516,258 pks., against 1,319,000 pks. same time in 1871; exports, 83,140,500 lbs. against 65,121,113 the same time in 1871. We quote as follows:

State Factory, extra fine	14¼@14½
State Factory, fair to fine	13 @14¼
State Factory, poor to fair	8 @12
State Dairy, poor to very choice	8 @14
Western Factory	8 @13¾
Skim	5 @ 9

EGGS—Have been offered with comparative reserve, and have been generally quoted firm, but the dealings have been on a somewhat restricted scale, buyers purchasing only to provide for urgent wants at the ruling prices. The receipts of the past three days have been 3,914 bbls., and for the week, 7,464 bbls.

VEGETABLES—The leading varieties have met with a greadier sale at generally stronger prices. The better qualities of Potatoes have been in moderate supply, and held with much more confidence, on an active inquiry. Cauliflowers are dearer and in fair request. The trade in Onions is more encouraging to sellers, who show more firmness.

POULTRY AND GAME—The demand for Poultry runs mainly on dressed stock, prices of which are somewhat irregular. Sales of supplies in good condition are quite prompt at current rates. Inferior lots are difficult to place. Live Poultry meets with little favor. There has been a freer offering of Game, and dealings have been on a more extensive scale within our range. Venison is quite abundant, and is cheaper.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART I.—NOV. 18.

Before Judge Spaulding and a Jury.

DAMAGES FOR AN INDECENT ASSAULT.

Leopoldine Gherling vs. Peter Kalt.—This was an action by the plaintiff, a married woman, to recover $5,000 damages against the defendant for an indecent assault. The evidence on the part of plaintiff was that in July, 1871, having just been married, she entered the store of defendant, at No. 43 First-avenue, to have her wedding wreath framed, defendant being a picture-frame maker. While in the store, and after defendant had served another customer, and sent his son out on a message, he invited plaintiff into his back room on pretense of looking at samples of frames, and there attempted to commit an indecent assault on her. It appeared on the part of the defense that defendant had fled the City, and his bondsmen were compelled to make the best defense for him they could. The defense interposed was that the act had never been perpetrated, and that the suit was the result of a conspiracy on the part of plaintiff and her husband to extort money from the defendant or his bondsmen.

After a charge from Judge Spaulding, in which he characterized the act, if committed, in the severest terms, the jury returned a verdict of $3,500 for plaintiff.

J. D. Reymert for plaintiff, Peter Cook for defendant.

The Horse Dropsy.

The horse dropsy has ceased to be a subject of anxiety among the majority of horse-owners. The death of some few horses debilitated by the ravages of the epizoötic is inevitable, but there is a general conviction that the dropsy will not prevail to any extent. Within the past few days the death-rate has rapidly decreased until now the number of bodies received at the Rendering Company's dock is very little over the usual figure, and much less than it was during the heated term last Summer. The obstacles in the way of obtaining even approximately the number of horses carried off by the disease since its first appearance are many. It is sufficiently well known that a majority of the car and stage companies concealed the number of deaths occurring in their stables during the prevalence of the disease in the form in which it first appeared, in order that by appearing to have healthy horses Mr. Bergh might not interfere with the running of the cars. The only other source from which accurate information could be derived is the books of the Rendering Company. To these the officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals were refused access. Last week a TIMES reporter was informed by the Rendering Company's Superintendent that a statement for publication, giving the exact number of horses carried off by the disease and the stables from which they came, would be prepared. That fact was published. Yesterday the Superintendent refused to give any statement. The reports from the several car and stage companies yesterday were encouraging. Few deaths occurred, and the dropsy is rapidly disappearing altogether.

Illness of a Member of Assembly.

The Bath (Steuben County) Advocate learns that Hon. Thomas M. Fowler, member of Assembly from the First District of Steuben County, is seriously and dangerously ill. His disease is typhoid fever. He was attacked some three weeks since, but was not considered in danger until lately. It is now feared that he cannot recover. Mr. Fowler was a member in 1872, and has just been re-elected.

SEEDS—Calcutta Linseed has advanced to $2 42½, gold, on sales of 7,000 bags from store, cash and sixty days. There has been some call for Clover on the basis of 9½c. for prime lots, for shipment. Timothy has been in light request. Rough Flax dull. We quote: Clover at 9¼c.@9¾c. ⅌ lb.; Rough Flax $1 90@$2; Timothy, $2 90@$3 30 for fair to choice, and Calcutta Linseed, $2 42½, gold, ⅌ bushel.

SUGARS—There has been unusual dullness in the market for Raw, prices of which, however, show no alteration. Refiners have been very reserved in their bids, and the trade inquiry has been limited. Sales, 45 hhds. Demerara at 11½c.@11¾c., and 10 hhds. Cuba at 10½c. ⅌ lb. Refined declined ⅛c. ⅌ lb. on a moderate trade.

TALLOW—Has been purchased to the extent of 89,000 lbs. at 8⅞c.@9⅛c., chiefly at 9⅛c. for prime, ⅌ lb.

WHISKY—Has been in fair demand and firm in price, closing in favor of sellers: 300 bbls. changed hands at 95½c., and 50 bbls. at 96c., the latter an extreme.

WOOL—Desirable grades of both domestic and foreign, especially the latter, have been in brisk demand, at very strong and advancing prices. Holders have been quite reserved in their offerings of stock, and have been claiming a further improvement of 3c.@5c. ⅌ lb., which operated to some extent, against free dealings. Manufacturers have shown more eagerness to purchase, though reluctant to pay the extreme asking rates. The trade call has also been more satisfactory. The Boston reports are of an excited, higher and irregular market, with dealers asking, in many instances, an advance of 10c.@15c. ⅌ lb. on the prices current before the great fire.

FREIGHTS—There has been a moderate movement reported in berth Freights since our last, chiefly in the way of Grain, Cotton and Lard shipments, on a steady basis as to rates. The chartering business has been on a restricted scale, with quotations for vessels for the Petroleum and Grain trades essentially as before, on a rather scant supply of suitable tonnage....For Liverpool, the reported engagements, since our last, have been, by sail, 7,800 bushels Wheat at 9½d. ⅌ bushel, and by steam, 1,000 bales Cotton (by an outside vessel) at ½d.@7-16d., the regular packets quoting at 7-16d.@½d. ⅌ lb.; 55,000 bushels Grain at 9d. for Corn and 9½d. for Wheat; 15,500 bushels Grain on private terms; 15,500 bushels Wheat (relet room) at 9d. ⅌ bushel; 2,000 bbls. Apples, mainly at 4s. ⅌ bbl.; 100 bales Hides, 1,500 Staves, and 75 hhds. Tobacco on private terms; 800 boxes Cheese at 45s.; 50 tcs. Beef and 30 hhds. Tallow on private terms; also, two ships, with Cotton, reported from New-Orleans, at 11-16d. ⅌ lb....For London, by steam, 15,500 bushels Wheat (relet room) at 10d. ⅌ bushel....For Glasgow, by steam, 23,000 bushels Grain at 8d. ⅌ bushel....For Cork and orders, an Italian bark, 457 tons, with about 3,300 quarters Grain (a recharter) at 7s. 7d. ⅌ quarter, and a Norwegian bark, 356 tons, with about 2,400 quarters do., (chartered previous to arrival) on private terms....For Bristol, by sail, 23,000 bushels Wheat at 9½d. ⅌ bushel, and 150 tons Oil-cake at 30s. ⅌ ton. Also, a British bark, 460 tons, with general cargo on private terms....For Havre, a Norwegian bark, 476 tons, with about 2,900 bbls. Petroleum and products, at 7s. ⅌ bbl....For Antwerp, by sail, 500 tcs. Lard at 40s., 300 bales Root at 35s., 25 pkgs. Merchandise at 40s., and, by steam, 250 tcs. The New-York Times.

DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, recognizing the claims of American industry in adjusting the sources of revenue; and it will advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

Complete official returns from the "doubtful" State of Illinois show a majority for Gen. GRANT of 55,529, and for Gov. OGLESBY of 40,115. As if this were not enough, the Congressional delegation from the State contains fourteen Republicans to five Democrats, and the Republicans have a majority of thirty-eight on joint ballot in the Legislature. It is a peculiarity of the election returns from all the States this year that they become worse and worse for the Coalition as they become complete, but, even keeping this fact in mind, nobody expected the Prairie State to make a record so magnificent as this. In 1868 the State gave Gen. GRANT a majority of only 51,150; Mr. TRUMBULL and the other Liberals are, doubtless, of the opinion that comparisons are odious.

Our Washington dispatches speak of a possible attempt on the part of certain Congressmen to embarrass the President in the completion of Civil Service reform. It is not impossible that such an attempt may be made, but we have no fear of the result. Indeed, the only persons who need fear are the Congressmen who engage in the scheme. The President's plan is a perfectly sincere effort to accomplish a needed reform. Do the Congressmen referred to mean to deny the need of a reform, or to question the method? If the former, they will be easily met. If the latter, let them suggest some better method.

One of the celebrated Cherokee land cases has been finally decided in favor of the purchaser. It will be remembered that the Cherokee reservation was abandoned by the tribe, who took their slaves and joined the rebels in the late war. There being a clause in the treaty with our Government which made rebellion a cause of forfeiture, a large number of persons settled on the abandoned reservation, and claimed it as against subsequent purchasers from the United States. The Supreme Court, on appeal, affirms the right of the purchasers, to the intense disgust of squatterdom, generally and individually.

The Alabama Legislature presents another of those instances of scandalous quarrels for power, where each party relies on technical advantages, which have been too frequent in the recent history of the Southern States. While there is no reason to apprehend the dangers threatened on a similar occasion in New-Orleans, it is a pity that such occurrences should take place. They belittle republican institutions, and if they were not a sign of a period of our development passing away rather than approaching, would be full of peril.

A cable dispatch reports the dismissal of sixty London policemen for "insubordination," though whether the offense was technical, or a substantial revolt against authority, is not stated. The difficulty grew out of an attempt to obtain higher wages. Neither insubordination nor anything like a strike is known to our policemen; the second, because they are paid too well to encounter the risks of the attempt; the first, because, in spite of demoralizing management, the body of the force has long been superior to those highest in authority.

The first chapter of a new version of an old story was repeated yesterday in the Pine-street murder. As thus far narrated, it shows that JAMES C. KING deliberately shot down ANTHONY F. O'NEIL, but KING, having become wise by the experience of his predecessors, declines to say anything "without the consent of his lawyers." There is the foundation here for all sorts of pleas of lunacy, and we suppose the dreary farce to which we have become so accustomed is to be re-enacted. We have no desire to prejudge this last, and in some respects most flagrant, violation of the law, but it is evident we must do something with our accumulating murderers, or something for them. The Tombs is already overcrowded with assassins, and the comfort of those on hand demands that they shall not be encroached upon by new comers. We have lost all hope that these murderers will be dealt with as the outraged law and the safety of society require, and only ask that in some way, their cases may be concluded.

Public Plunderers.

An attempt was made in the last Legislature to secure a stricter responsibility on the part of Municipal officers. It was defeated by the veto of the Ring Governor and the machinations of the corrupt Republicans who were at the time engaged in the first steps of the scheme which resulted in the nomination of Mr. GREELEY by the Democrats, on the urgent recommendation of the Ring. It is very greatly to be desired that a measure having the same end in view, and even more comprehensive in its scope, should be matured at the approaching session. At present our Municipal officers are restrained by little else than their own consciences. In the presence of enormous temptations, checked by few of the traditions of integrity which are yet powerful in the affairs of the State and nation, and constantly beset by partisan associates to wield their offices for other than the good of the whole public, they are almost absolutely released from fear of punishment, because no adequate punishment is provided by law for betrayal of trust on their part. The salesman in a millinery-shop or the boy in a corner grocery may manage to take from the till twenty-five dollars and ten cents, and the law declares that, at the Judge's discretion, he may be sent to State Prison, and bear for the rest of his life the character of a felon. But if the executive officers of a city plunder its tax-payers of millions, even supposing it possible to bring their technical guilt home to them, the most upright and severe Court in the land can only inflict upon them imprisonment in the County Jail for a twelvemonth and a fine of two hundred and fifty dollars. This is the view taken of the present condition of our criminal law by some of our ablest lawyers, and confirmed by the result of a number of trials.

No language can set forth more clearly the utter absurdity and the great danger of this state of things than is done by the simple statement of the facts, in the light of the recent experience of New-York. But it may be added that this lamentable defectiveness of our criminal law is supplemented by considerable obscurity as to who has or has not the right to bring civil suits to recover money stolen from the public, while criminal suits are subject to other difficulties, too numerous to mention here in detail. Several remedies have been proposed. It is not necessary now to recount them, or to undertake to decide as to their merits. But the attention of the members of the next Legislature cannot be fixed too early or too earnestly upon this subject. There can be no good reason why something should not be accomplished this Winter. It is desirable, too, that it should not be a partial measure, designed for this City alone, or that other cities should be left to shift as best they may by means of special provisions in their several charters. New-York is only one of a number of cities large enough, and having a sufficiently varied population, to experience the same evils, differing rather in degree than in kind from our own. The needs of all these cities are illustrated by the experience of New-York, and they are likely to be greater in the future, instead of less. Not only are nearly all our cities growing in population faster than the agricultural districts, but the residents of cities demand a great deal more of their Governments now than when the people used to interest themselves more largely in the management of public business. The supplying of protection to life and property in all its branches, the police, the fire department, the sanitary department and the complex machinery of local courts, with the management of the streets and ways, and the provision of parks, already require the exercise of enormous powers, the expenditure of enormous sums of money. With every decade these requirements will extend. Add the fact that much of the expenditure is met by the pledge of the City credit, and that the use of this delicate but powerful instrument is far more loosely watched than the immediate use of money, and it is easy to see how great is the disproportion between the trusts we place in the hands of our public servants and the safeguards with which we surround their exercise. It is not too much to say that the proper solution of the problem here presented is, on the whole, the most important business awaiting the Legislature. If it is only fairly attempted, that body will deserve the thanks of the people. In such an attempt we should say that both the Committee of Seventy and the Bar Association could render valuable service.

Street Openings Again.

In the TIMES of Saturday, a general statement was given of the extortionate assessments for pending street-opening schemes with which up-town property-owners are threatened. From some highly suggestive correspondence, published in another column, a very good idea may be formed of the enormous frauds which have been perpetrated upon property-owners during the last few years by the co-operation of Ring Judges, and through the agency of what is known as the "Bureau of Street Openings," in the office of the Corporation Counsel. The essential part of that correspondence is a letter in which Controller GREEN states with characteristic vigor, directness, and comprehensiveness, the character of the street-opening schemes carried through during 1870-71. This letter was written in August last for the information of an association of west-side property-owners, and the public interest which has been aroused by the ventilation of the subject in these columns makes its publication now highly seasonable. During the exciting struggle in national politics which has engrossed public attention for several months past, this communication would have failed to secure the careful perusal it deserves. Now that the uppermost thought of a large proportion of the citizens of New-York is how to complete, in all its details, the work of local reform, Mr. GREEN's letter comes as a very important contribution to the stock of public information in regard to some of the most flagrant abuses which remain of the Tammany heritage of Municipal corruption.

The so-called "Bureau" of Street Openings is not a bureau in any legal sense at all. "The charge and conduct of the legal proceedings necessary in widening and opening streets" is confided, by the charter of 1870, to the Corporation Counsel—a position at present rendered ridiculous by the incumbency of RICHARD O'GORMAN. He has been pleased to delegate that duty to a subordinate who has dubbed himself with the fancy title of Chief of a bureau, probably to soften down a little the palpable absurdity of a mere clerk being in the receipt of enormous fees, and probably, also, to screen his master, O'GORMAN, from the public odium to which his direct responsibility for the street-opening swindles justly entitles him. With the Corporation Counsel's man—GEORGE H. PURSER—the public have little concern. His talent for writing impertinent letters seems to be in inverse ratio to his knowledge of the plainest provisions of law, and the convenient indisposition which caused his retreat to Florida, when Tammany began to totter under the assaults of the TIMES, may at any moment deprive the community of his marvelously expensive clerical services. It is with O'GORMAN and his "pals" of the street-opening Ring that the public and the property-owners have to do, and it will not be our fault if the chief conspirators are allowed to wriggle out of the responsibility per favor of PURSER or anybody else.

Even should the Corporation Counsel urge the somewhat preposterous plea that he had no power to prevent the appointment by Ring Judges of men like GRATZ NATHAN, "MIKE" NORTON, and "NICK" MULLER as Commissioners of Street Openings, he was undoubtedly charged with the duty of seeing that their fees were kept within the limit of the law of 1862, which prescribes thirty cents per lineal foot of the part of street or avenue opened or altered, as the maximum rate on which the entire bill of the Commissioners can be based. He is, also, primarily responsible for the preposterous sums charged under the head of "clerk's fees," "copying reports," "stationery," &c. Take the case of the Broome-street widening, cited in the letter of Mr. GREEN, and the bill for which, to the great disgust of O'GORMAN and his clerk, the Controller refused to pay. For the simple legal cost of securing the title of the City to a strip of land forty-two yards long by six yards wide, there was run up the enormous bill of $18,850 28. Of this, GRATZ NATHAN and his fellow-commissioners claim $3,600 for fees, which is exactly $3,562 50 more than the law allows them. O'GORMAN's clerk claims $1,640 for "drafting and copying report," &c., while the bill for advertising, stationery, and room rent amounts to $7,167 67. And this is the claim whose non-payment urged O'GORMAN and PURSER to come before the people with the hypocritical pretense that the Finance Department was blocking the wheels of public business! A reference to the tables appended to Mr. GREEN's letter will show that under the facile administration of Controller CONNOLLY, claims even more outrageous than this were promptly honored. The property-owners of New-York cannot rise from a study of these tables without a fresh perception of the vast pecuniary value of the master-stroke which wrested the Controller's office from the grasp of Tammany Hall.

New-York, Brooklyn, and Westchester County.

Washington dispatches state that the question of consolidating the New-York and Brooklyn Post-offices is to be agitated in Congress the coming Winter. There is certainly ample room for improvement in the postal accommodations now enjoyed by the people of Brooklyn, even though there may be a difference of opinion as to the propriety of consolidating the Brooklyn Post-office with that of New-York. The sluggish movement of Uncle Sam's mails toward the City of Churches is a standing subject of complaint with our neighbors across the river, while the frequent peculations and shortcomings of the Brooklyn office are not calculated to impress the General Office at Washington with a favorable idea of its internal management. It is a common thing for a letter, dropped in the New-York office, to take two or three days in reaching its destination in Brooklyn, when it ought not to require as many hours, and letters dropped in the Brooklyn office, addressed to distant points, are almost invariably one day behind similar letters dropped in the New-York office in reaching their destination.

The difficulty seems to be that, in postal facilities as in everything else, Brooklyn suffers all the disadvantages of being regarded by everybody as merely a suburb of New-York, while it gets none of the benefits that would accrue from a consolidation of the two cities under one Government, and a united administration of their various departments, municipal and national. With its population of four hundred thousand souls, and its boast of being the third city in the United States, it still finds it impossible to convince the world that it is anything more than a part and parcel—a single Ward as it were—of New-York, or that it has any right to be recognized as a separate and independent city. It thus gets no credit in the eyes of the world for trying to stand alone, while its separate and distinct machinery of Municipal Government, Post-offices, Courts, Police, &c., only serve as a clog to its progress, and prevent its enjoying the facilities of the Metropolis, of which it naturally forms a part.

Ten or fifteen years ago there was a plausible, if not a valid, reason why the people of Brooklyn, and particularly the tax-payers, should object to a consolidation with New-York, and insist upon maintaining a separate municipality. The tax upon property was at that time only about one-half or two-thirds as high as in New-York. But that reason no longer exists; on the contrary, the property-owners of Brooklyn, many of whom crossed over the river to escape high taxes, have seen their assessments gradually increase from year to year, until now they are a third or a half per cent. higher than on Manhattan Island. Nor have they had the consolation of seeing their municipal government keep pace, in honesty and purity, with the increase of taxation. Corrupt politicians have found the soil of Long Island scarcely less productive than New-York; "Rings" have been formed with equal facility there as here, and "Boss" MCLAUGHLIN has shown himself a worthy counterpart of "Boss" TWEED.

While New-York has well-nigh broken up her "Rings," cast out her thieves, and displaced her corrupt officials with honest men, Brooklyn has scarcely made a beginning to this end; so that, as matters stand now, the Metropolis has a decided advantage over her ambitious and independent suburb in all that pertains to honest municipal rule, moderate taxation, and adequate Police protection. There is no longer even a plausible reason why tax-payers, or any one else living in Brooklyn, should not seek the earliest opportunity to join their fortunes with New-York under a single united, consolidated municipality. The Brooklyn Bridge, with its towering abutments standing face to face on either side of the river, heralds, let us hope, the near approach of the nuptials of the two cities. The day on which that magnificent work is completed should also witness the union, under one government, of a population whose interests and wants have always been identified. It will be entirely satisfactory, therefore, if the initiatory step toward this union shall be taken at Washington, by the consolidation of the Post-offices of the two cities. The immediate advantages that cannot fail to accrue from such a consolidation, will naturally prejudice the minds of Brooklyn people in favor of an entire union of the two municipalities.

The same reasons that exist for consolidating New-York and Brooklyn, together with others of a different and, in some respects, a more urgent character, apply with equal force to the project for annexing Westchester County with the Metropolis. Any one who has read the series of articles published in this journal, on the subject of the Westchester annexation, cannot have failed to see the absolute necessity of the project, and the certainty that it will ultimately, and at no distant day, be carried out. Neither the East River nor the Harlem River will be permitted much longer to perpetuate unnatural barriers between members of the same community—all doing business under one corporate jurisdiction and drawing their sustenance from the same source. Common sense, community of interest, economy even, demand that these needless, unnatural, and expensive divisions of a contiguous and homogeneous population, under separate municipal governments, shall cease, and that they shall all become members of one grand, consolidated Metropolitan City.

The Expenditures of the Poor.

It is the pride and boast of Americans, that in their country the working man is better off than anywhere else in the world. Here the laborer gets more money, wears better clothes, is more comfortably fed and housed, than in any other land under the sun. In this fact lies the secret of much of the Republic's greatness, present and prospective; and but for it, it is certain that our rate of progress, in wealth, in numbers, and in national influence, would at once be seriously checked, if not altogether arrested. Now, it is chiefly as compared with the position of the English artisan and laborer that the advantages of their American brethren are pointedly dwelt upon; and certainly the worker on this side of the Atlantic has far the best of it. Yet, strangely enough, statistics show an amount of outlay on the part of the English working classes for what must be called pure luxuries that is simply staggering. Frazer's Magazine lately printed an article on the luxuries of the rich; and, although the criticism was very severe, it was applauded as very just. The same monthly has now published a second essay on the luxuries of the poor; and this, while exceedingly instructive, is equally condemnatory. A consideration of the facts set forth in this latter article, shows at once the enormous financial power of the working classes, if they chose to co-operate and put it forth, and the vast waste which constantly goes on among those classes, in spite of the supposed meagre payment of labor by capital.

It appears, for example, that in the four years ending with 1869, the average annual expenditure in Great Britain and Ireland on intoxicating drink, amounted to four hundred and fifty millions of pounds—or five times that number of gold dollars in our money. This prodigious sum, greater than the present national debt of the United States, is shown to have been expended by the working classes in the proportion of two-thirds of the whole. The average wages of the working classes is $420 a year. Of this, nearly one-fourth is spent for drink and tobacco. Half goes for food, about one-tenth for rent, and the rest for fuel, lights, clothes, recreation, and doctor's bills. The taxes on stimulants come to about two hundred millions of dollars, being about one-half the whole annual taxation. Therefore, about one hundred and forty millions of dollars, gold, are paid yearly by the English working classes, by way of tax, on the spirits, beer, and tobacco they consume. Hence, an amount equal to the whole British national debt at the end of the great wars in 1798, is yearly spent by British laborers in 1872 for stimulants; an amount, still more astonishing to say, nine times as great as the amount yearly spent at this time, by the same classes, for cotton goods. These facts were lately restated and verified by Hon. CHICHESTER FORTESCUE, in a speech made to working men at Radstock, and they are worthy of deep reflection, here as well as in England. We do not suppose, for a moment, that the ratio of outlay for drink and tobacco in America is anything like what it is in England. But that it is very high is certain; and that working people deliberately deprive themselves by it of a vast share of power and comfort, which they might otherwise have, is equally obvious.

That Government benefits by this outlay to the extent of its immediate cash receipt is plain. But it requires no demonstration to show that a nation must, in the aggregate, grow richer in proportion as it puts its earnings into property which is imperishable, or practically so; and that, other things being equal, it must be poorer, in proportion to the investment of those earnings in what immediately disappears. The need of stimulus, again, for the animal economy, of course, suggests some nice questions, and we are not prepared to admit that the extreme maxims of the teetotaller are irrefragably sound. But without making such an admission, we must allow that twenty-five per cent. of gross earnings is an inordinate fraction to bestow on stimulants; and that to this, as well as to poor pay, a certain share of the misery existing among the British working classes is fairly to be imputed. It is only by the contemplation of these matters in their gross results, that we can rightly estimate their scope and their significance. We perceive, for instance, that, were the vast sums thus spent for drink judiciously invested for a generation, or an average working life, the whole body of survivors among the working classes could be pretty surely maintained in comfort to the end of their days. This is, of course, but one of many ways wherein greater wisdom and self-control among those classes could be made to result to their own advantage. Whether such improvements are to be brought about by total abstinence societies, or by a general elevation of the standards of education, is a problem open to diverse conjecture. Meanwhile, the importance of the subject can hardly be exaggerated, and its bearing upon national and individual prosperity should gain for it the most earnest attention of humanitarians and sociologists.

The Five-Ton Question.

The increased interest in athletic sports which has recently been manifested in this country, gives us reason to suppose that next Summer will witness a general revival of ball-playing and gymnastics, and a marked increase in the membership of our boating and yachting clubs. It may be thought rather premature at this season to make any suggestion as to the improvement of yachting regulations, but the enthusiastic yachtsman does not dismiss his beloved sloop or schooner from his mind when he has laid her up at the end of the Fall, but delights to devote the leisure of his Winter to devising new improvements in her model or rig, which shall gain fresh laurels for her when the yachting season again opens.

Just at present, the English yachtsmen are engaged in a discussion of the desirability of five-ton yachts, which ought to be of interest to our own amateur sailors. As a rule, the yachtsman, the world over, resigns the command of his vessel to a sailing-master, whenever she is entered for a race. Now, inasmuch as a race is as often won by skill in seamanship as it is by the sailing qualities of the successful yacht, it follows that a regatta is usually quite as much a test of the relative ability of sailing-masters as it is of the speed of rival yachts. It would certainly be much more satisfactory to the yachtsman to win a race in the actual command of his own craft, than it can be to know that to his sailing-master really belongs the credit of the victory. The circumstances in which a man ordinarily becomes a yacht-owner, unfit him for personally commanding his vessel. The yacht is bought when he has accumulated a fortune, and there is no royal road to the acquisition of seamanship which even the gold of the millionaire can open. It follows, therefore, that the fortunate man who suddenly finds himself the owner of a fine schooner, is as incapable of managing her as he would be to control the engines of a steam-yacht, had his taste inclined him to purchase so unromantic a pleasure-vessel. He does not care to display his ignorance by learning to handle his yacht in the presence of a crew of irreverent critics, and he therefore quietly resigns himself into the hands of the inevitable sailing-master, and becomes a passenger when he ought to be a Captain.

Now, the five-ton yacht is intended by its English advocates to be the school-ship of the yachtsman. The man who becomes the owner of so small a craft as this, of course, expects to manage her himself. This he can learn to do with but little coaching from some accomplished boat-sailer, and when he has thoroughly mastered the art of sailing his five-ton vessel, he can make shift to handle a larger yacht with safety, and by the experience which he will rapidly gain, will ultimately learn to sail her with consummate skill. Of course, it does not follow that because a man can handle a "cat-boat" creditably, he can therefore sail any sort of vessel. He will, however, learn the rudiments of seamanship, and if his five-ton yacht is yawl-rigged—a sort of rig strangely neglected in this country—she will furnish him with the best possible experience preliminary to undertaking the command of a schooner-yacht.

The advocates of the five-ton yacht are, therefore, aiming at the ultimate abolition of the sailing-master. It is worthy of notice that those English yachtsmen, who are also enthusiastic canoe men, are the leaders in this movement, and their conviction of the desirability that every yachtsman should sail his own yacht, is, doubtless, partly due to the love of seamanship developed by sailing one's own canoe. In like manner, the New-York Canoe Club may in time prove the nursery of yachtsmen who will be emancipated from the sailing-master, and who will win yachting prizes which will reflect as much credit on their seamanship as upon the speed of their vessels. In the mean time, however, our yachtsmen should join in the discussion of the five-ton question; a discussion which, however it may end, must tend to increase the interest both of yachtsmen and the general public in one of the manliest of all manly sports.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

That symmetrical form of retribution known as poetical justice is very dear to the common sense of mankind. The proverbial biter who was bit, and the traditional seeker after wool who came back shorn, present pleasing images to the reflective mind. The most amiable reader is tickled at the discomfiture of the honorable Mr. Deuceace by that more astute rascal, the noble Earl, his father, and sees with uncommon gratification Mr. Jonathan Wild conducted to the scaffold, whither he had sent so many others. There is a world of rude philosophy in the popular adage which makes the second thief the best owner. The only danger is that, by comparison with the rogue he has despoiled, he may seem almost as good as an honest man.

There is little risk of that, however, in the pleasing instance of poetical justice to which we have now to call attention. We showed, a few days since, how our excellent and upright Sheriff was in the practice of sending in to litigants exorbitant bills for services never rendered and fees unwarranted by law, so that out of a sample bill of $419, the Court found just $400 to be pure extortion. Now, it seems the lesson of fraud thus set by the master has been a little too faithfully learned by the servants. The model public officer in question has just ascertained, with what horror may be imagined, that his own deputies, the disciples whom he had trained in all the arts of fleecing with the care and assiduity of another Fagin, had begun to turn his own devices against himself. One of them had adopted the ingenious plan of paying all claims he collected with worthless checks of his own, which, being promptly dishonored, the Sheriff was obliged to make good. He had already paid out from his scanty and hard-earned pittance the enormous sum of sixteen hundred dollars, the proceeds, perhaps, of five or six such masterly strokes of business as that which Judge ROBINSON so cruelly balked, before he found out this hypocrite's base ingratitude. Of course, the wicked deceiver was suspended from duty at once, and, with that sublime impudence which has distinguished the rascals of the Ring, suit begun against the delinquent's sureties. Mr. Pecksniff begging to be reminded to pray particularly hard for Mr. Anthony Chuzzlewit, was not a more enticing picture.

We are afraid that Mr. BRENNAN in this calamity, will not receive that full measure of sympathy to which his woes may seem to entitle him. For reasons indicated in the beginning of this article, the public, it is to be feared, will rather side with the rascally deputy to the extent, at least, of thinking that if he is a rascal, he is no worse than some of his betters. If Sheriff BRENNAN defrauds the public, and his deputies defraud Sheriff BRENNAN, the original losers will be apt to find the second spoliation rather meritorious than otherwise. Certainly, it is a very pretty quarrel as it stands. It has been said that in a falling out of this nature honest men come by their own. If in this case the proverb should be falsified, it will certainly not be for want of any essential characteristic in the fallers-out.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Miss Anthony Pleased that Her Case is to Come Properly Before the Courts.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Warrants having been issued against Susan B. Anthony and fifteen other females for casting their votes in the First District of the Eighth Ward at the last election, Miss Anthony, as soon as served with the process, at once retained Hon. Henry R. Selden to defend her. Judge Selden and Assistant United States District-Attorney Pond met this afternoon, by previous understanding, at United States Commissioner Storr's office. Miss Anthony and her sister were present. The warrant was read, but, by agreement between counsel, the examination was postponed until the 29th inst. The defendant says she is pleased to have her case brought properly before the Courts. Warrants have been issued for the inspectors of election who received the ballots of Susan B. Anthony and her friends.

THE LATE GEN. MEADE.

Memorial Meeting in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia—A Fund for the Family Nearly Complete.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 18.—A memorial meeting in respect to the memory of the late Gen. Meade was held this afternoon in the Academy of Music. It was a very impressive affair. The members of the Union League attended in a body. Bishop Stevens opened the proceedings with prayer. Gen. Humphreys pronounced the oration. A series of resolutions was adopted, and closing remarks were made by Charles Gibbons. Selections of music were interspersed and added to the interest of the proceedings, which were witnessed by an immense audience.

The business men of this city have nearly completed a fund of $100,000 for the family of Gen. Meade.

FRANCE.

Two Fete Days in the Capital—"The Day of the Dead" and its Observance—At the Cemeteries—The Assembly—The "Incident La Fere"—Opening of the Schools.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Nov. 4, 1872.

"All Saints' Day" and "All Souls' Day" were both wet and disagreeable. Rain fell in showers, and the streets were horribly muddy. Yet it was estimated that one hundred thousand persons attended mass in the various churches on Toussaint, and on Saturday there was a very considerable crowd, despite the rain, at the different cemeteries. For the first time since the arrest of Prince Napoleon we were reminded of the fact that M. Thiers had 115,000 soldiers in Paris in order to prevent demonstrations. Since the baptism of the Prince Imperial, in 1856, a grand gala day, as you are aware, and when the Victoria medals were distributed to the troops just returned from the Crimea, I have never seen the streets so encumbered with armed men. Strong forces of dragoons were stationed about the cemeteries and along the streets leading to them, and, in addition to the gendarmes, a number of men were stationed, in citizens' dress, near the popular tombs. If these were not agents in disguise, or mouchards, they were taken for such, and many a revolutionnaire carried his wreath by the tombs of Baudin and Godfrey Cavaignac rather than risk being marked and followed by placing it upon the graves. It was reported that these agents hoped to entrap a few Communists, who have yet succeeded in concealing themselves, but considering the number arrested it may be seriously questioned whether any remain to be entrapped in this way. The report was probably a measure of intimidation. Yet arrests do go on slowly, and two have taken place within the past few days. One was a nobody it would have been wise to have let alone, the other was an actor at the Varietés, where he has been publicly known and seen ever since the Commune. Yet he was arrested only a week ago, and will be sent to New-Caledonia. How this act will benefit the republic of M. Thiers is more than I can now see. The actor was on the staff of one of the leading Communists, and led a merry life, it seems, while the power of his chief lasted.

AT THE CEMETERIES.

Thanks to the precautions taken by the Government, there were no political demonstrations, and it may be added that the weather would have policed the cemeteries had the forces been withdrawn, for it has been observed that there is nothing like a shower of rain to dampen the ardor of a revolutionary faction. A few wreaths were placed upon the tomb of Cavaignac, and a few bouquets, all composed of bright red flowers, and a wreath of red dahlias, were placed upon the grave of Théophile Ferré, shot at Sartory. In one of the bouquets was found a verse comparing Ferré to Jesus Christ, since both worked for humanity and both had their Calvary. This composition was removed by the gendarmes, but not before a Radical journalist had taken a copy. The tomb of Théophile Gautier was covered with wreaths, and Ary Scheffer's tomb was decorated as tastefully as usual, the three pots of living flowers being placed outside by some one who loved him, but who cannot claim the right to pass the steps of the artist's tomb. The friends and relatives of Scheffer place their offerings within; this poor woman, whoever she may be, secretly and modestly leaves her flowers at the door. At Montmartre, besides Ary Scheffer, repose Alfred de Vigny, Léon Gozlan, Daniel Manin, Adolph Adam Nourrit, Henri Heine, Gruze, Halévy, the Prince de Saxe, Mme. de Girardin, the Duchesse d'Abrantes, and too many more to mention. At Pere Lachaise repose Rossini, Alfred de Musset, Firmin Didat, Laya, Martin du Nord, Dupuytren, Benjamin Constant, Marshal Ney, Picard, Racine, Lafontaine, Gros, Casimer Delavigne, and more than a thousand others, whose works live after them. The tomb of Abelard and Heloise was visited more than usual this year, and thanks to the abominable travesty called opera bouffe now being given under that name. To show how the touching story is used in this piece, I may say that Abelard is represented as the father of many children. Several wreaths were thrown upon the recumbent statues of the lovers this year, and last year there were none. Despite the heavy rain in the evening the police had to drive the people away from their dead. Several touching stories are told. One lady was seen kneeling in the mud before a grave, with the rain pouring down upon her head. Some passers could not resist holding an umbrella over her. It was a simple tomb, bearing the single name, "Marie," and in the niche was a doll, with one arm broken, its waxy eyes staring sorrowfully and almost piteously. When the lady had finished her prayer, the gentleman with the umbrella said, "It is your child, I presume?" "Yes, it is my baby; she has slept there for twenty years beside her doll." The French never use the past tense in speaking of their dead, and they seem to have as firm a faith in present existence of some sort as Wordsworth's little girl in "We are Seven."

THE ASSEMBLY.

The vacation of the Assembly ends this week, and in a few days more we shall be in the midst of a political agitation as yet unparalleled. Many things have occurred during the past three months to embitter party feelings, and the Deputies will return to their work in no agreeable state of mind. M. Thiers has beaten the Monarchists; he has routed them in confusion; but he has only done so by uniting with the Radicals of the Left. The question is, since he has started upon that route, will he be able to stop at a conservative republic. The Conservatives say that he cannot; but when one has in his hands a scarcely limited power, and does not scruple to use it whenever convenient, legally or otherwise, it is pretty safe to say that almost anything can be accomplished. With the means at his command, I do not see what is to stop M. Thiers in any important matter, for what opposition can be expected from a party divided into so many factions as the Conservative, and having so few men willing to stake their lives and their fortunes upon principle. In all English revolutions, in all cases of usurpation of power, and in our domestic difficulties, men are found ready to oppose the supreme power, and to risk everything in a cause they believe to be just. Here there are no men of that kind. When the mob swept out the Corps Législatif there was not a single bold Baron, not a daring gentleman, ready to die in his seat rather than yield to this unlawful invasion. Had there been two or three such men the mob could have been cowed. Every time a party of Conservatives unite in opposition and swear to stand firm, every man leaves under the impression that every other man is going to betray him, and sells out as quickly as possible. M. Thiers has the means of buying out these week-kneed gentlemen, and he thus has the power of breaking up coalitions against him. So long as M. Thiers lasts, therefore, I see no reason why he should not succeed, but it is after him that the deluge will come. How long he will remain is a problem which cannot be worked out by the "rule of three," but it must be remembered that he is hard on to seventy-five years of age.

THE "INCIDENT LA FERE."

Among the incidents of the vacation which has caused emotion in the public mind—that is to say, in the minds of a few public men, who, like the three tailors of Tooley-street, always say "we, the people, think," when expressing a private opinion—is the incident of La Fère. A certain number of high officers there gave a dinner, Gen. Fabre, of Gen. de Cissey's staff, being a guest. The newspapers report that, after wine, these officers began to talk politics, and Gen. Fabre remarked that at the Ministry of War everybody was Bonapartist, and that Gen. de Cissey was bound to stop all officers from going to hear Gambetta, while all who wished could have leave to visit Chiselhurst. The officers gave a flat denial to this story. Nevertheless the radical journal began to demand the dismissal of the Secretary, and a deputation was sent to M. Thiers on the subject. "It is true," he said, "that Gen. de Cissey has not yet pronounced for the Republic, and I cannot find a man who is capable of filling this important position. Gen. de Cissey works sixteen hours a day. Moreover, there has been an inquiry into the affair at La Fère; all present have denied the story." The Officiel contained a denial and also a letter of denial from the officers. Then the original writer, who probably got his news from one of the servants, stated that Gen. Fabre had said, if no more, that at the War Office it would be preferred that an officer should go to Chiselhurst rather than to hear Gambetta. This modified the matter considerably, but again the officers put in a denial. A new inquiry was held, and a new denial appeared in the Officiel. Yet, the Radicals said that at any rate this incident showed that Gen. de Cissey was a Bonapartist, (how, I do not exactly see, since it was not true,) and demanded his withdrawal. Some very hard things were said about him, but he has allayed the burning sensibilities of these men by issuing a republican order worthy of the Government of September. It has been found that many of the buttons upon the uniforms and the gaiters of the troops still bear the Imperial stamp and have an effigy of the Imperial eagle. Gen. de Cissey's order does away with this scandalous state of things, and for the time being the crusade against him has been dropped. If it begins again he can order the eagle off the new opera house, and in case of necessity he can instruct the people that they are not obliged to take gold pieces bearing the head of Napoleon III., but can claim payment in good Republican bank notes.

OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS.

The schools opened this morning, and I went once into the Quartier Latin to see what sort of a class appears this year. I found things changed, but the more things changed the more everything remains just the same. The class is smaller than usual, and the benches harder—at the Law School, I mean—for it is astonishing how much harder these old benches do grow with age. At twenty I found them excellent; at five and thirty they were unendurable. Besides, the professors do not seem so instructing as they did, for I remember with what delight I took notes of this very lecture on Justinian, fifteen years ago. But youth gilds everything—happy youth!—and the best part of my hour was spent in watching these young aspirants for a Doctorate, as they scratched away at their note-books. It looks business-like, and had an undoubted effect upon the professors when one is up for the "little go," or for the final sheepskin, but I wonder if any fellow ever did look over the notes he made in the lecture-room? The present law class is composed of younger boys than usual, but I see there a few old "mossy heads," who have been studying there ten years, and always failed to pass their requisite examinations. They are law students by profession, and it gives them a position, in fact, better than their talents would gain in other walks. There are a few middle-aged men, who are real students, however, generally strangers, and, probably, destined to be professors themselves one of these days.

METROPOLITAN MUSEUM OF ART.

New Building in Central Park—Purchase of Splendid Foreign Collections—The Work of the Trustees.

The patrons and lovers of fine arts will be gratified at the announcement that the site for the "Metropolitan Museum of Art" in this City has finally been selected, the plans for the structure agreed upon, and work commenced. Another important item is, that the Trustees of the Museum have ordered a duplicate of the best specimens of the splendid collection in the South Kensington Museum, London; and a still more satisfactory announcement is that the rare and valuable objects of art, consisting of antique statues, superb vases, and rich specimens of ancient sculpture and handiwork, recently discovered in the Island of Cyprus, have just been secured, at a large outlay, for the new Museum.

The proposed building is to be erected in Central Park, at the corner of Fifth-avenue and Seventy-ninth-street, instead of in Manhattan-square, on Eighth-avenue, where the Tammany Ring were to have put it, in the interest of their own speculations, while the Museum fund had already been devoted to other objects. One of the first official acts of Controller Green was to secure this fund of $150,000 for its legitimate purpose, and the new Board of Park Commissioners have been active in their efforts to establish the Museum on a firm basis, believing that it is destined to become one of the grandest of our public institutions. One of the Commissioners accepted his position principally to assist in this undertaking. The Trustees of the Museum, an honorary body of prominent citizens, have made great exertions in its behalf, and the temporary gallery in Fifth-avenue is the result of their labors. Under the supervision of Mr. Geo. P. Putnam, this gallery has become an attraction of the City, besides being a school for artists and art students.

Respecting the new additions to the Museum, the most important will be the Cyprus collection. This collection, beyond its intrinsic value, has a history which is of special interest to Americans. The following are the principal facts relating to it: Gen. Di Cesnola, late Colonel of the Fourth New-York Cavalry, was appointed Consul to Cyprus at the close of the war, and while there he devoted himself to studying the traditions and antiquities of the island. Receiving special permit from the authorities, he commenced explorations among the ancient tombs and temple sites, for which Cyprus is historic, and made extensive discoveries. In the course of a few years he secured a valuable collection, including busts, statues, and curiosities of every description. This he recently shipped to England with a view to its disposal to some public institution, and the British Museum was proposing to buy it, when Mr. J. T. Johnston, of this City, aware of its value and the necessity of prompt action, if it was to be secured for this country, made final arrangements for its purchase for the New-York Museum. The collection has been valued at $200,000, if disposed of in parcels, but in view of the fact that it would be taken as a whole and brought to the United States, Gen. Di Cesnola parted with it at a much less sum. The British Museum coveted the collection, but New-York happily comes into final possession of it. To give a full description of the collection in a brief space would be impossible. It includes objects from colossal Phenician heads to the smallest coins and gems of art, and some idea of the extent of Di Cesnola's excavations may be gathered from the fact that he opened 8,000 tombs. Of objects which will specially interest art-lovers, there are Greek and Egyptian heads from the Temple of Venus at Golgos, statues of Macedonians and Phenicians, gigantic Assyrian heads, bronze statuettes, &c. To the archæologist, the collection will be a mine for thought and speculation. It is believed that the Phenician relics are the first that have been discovered of that early maritime people, and the various specimens will materially aid specialists and antiquaries in furnishing clearer pictures of Eastern life and manners three thousand years ago. A Mr. Hitchcock, who visited Gen. Di Cesnola in Cyprus, states that his collection in 1870 numbered 13,000 pieces, comprising many statues, 1,800 lamps, 5,000 vases, 2,000 coins, 600 gold ornaments, 1,700 pieces of glass of all descriptions, 300 pieces of bronze, and 100 inscriptions. Of the vases, 869 are of different designs. The discovery of these relics is considered one of the most important of the century, and the royal museums have sent their representatives to inspect them. In the Summer of 1870, the Emperor of France authorized a liberal offer for it in behalf of the Imperial Museum of the Louvre, but the German war put an end to his enterprise as well as to his Empire. Said Mr. Hitchcock, "the importance of the discoveries in Cyprus is recognized by the world of science, and Di Cesnola has been made an honorary member of the archæological societies of Athens, Rome, Dresden, Berlin, and Paris, and other royal academies. It is to be hoped that America, of which the discoverer is a worthy and honored citizen, will anticipate the action of London, Berlin, and St. Petersburg, and secure this rare collection."

The general plans of the building for the Museum have been made by the architect of the Park, with the concurrence of an advisory board of architects, representing the Trustees. It is proposed to establish at first a central building, to which eventually, as necessity arises, wings and extensions can be added. In the main part there will be four galleries, each ninety-five feet long and lighted from above. The ground floor will be an open court, girted with gardens and fountains, and affording ample room for statuary, vases, monuments, &c. To complete this extensive project will necessarily take time, but the citizens of New-York will be amply repaid for their patience, as the Museum cannot fail to become the pride of the City.

The present gallery in Fifth-avenue has just received accessions in the shape of Houdon's original bust of Franklin, two striking pictures by the Dutch artist, Vanderhelst, and a fine painting by Carel de Moor, whose works are seldom met with. The South Kensington collection consists of beautiful statues, vases, potteries, &c., and a duplicate of these has been ordered by the Trustees for the Museum.

Taxation in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Nov. 18.—The Finance Committee today agreed upon fixing the tax rate for 1873 at $2 15 on $100—$2 for regular rate, five cents for paving Broad and Market streets, and ten cents for public buildings.

AMUSEMENTS.

Dramatic.

MISS NEILSON AS "JULIET" AT BOOTH'S THEATRE.

A fine audience—fine in culture, in numbers, and in that air of stirring curiosity so pleasant to see as anticipating an intellectual entertainment—gathered last night at Booth's Theatre. Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" was the play, and a young English lady, Miss Neilson, was advertised to appear, for the first time in the United States, as the heroine. An actor new to these boards was likewise put up for the hero; and a favorite artist, Mr. James W. Wallack, gave strength to the cast by undertaking Mercutio. The certainty of having the tragedy beautifully placed on the stage—since all the accessories were promised of the late notable revival here—also lent attraction to the evening and zest to the expected enjoyment. Thus it is not strange that so numerous and respectable a body of play-goers should have come together on the occasion. It is gratifying to add that they were not disappointed. We cannot offer praise of this performance without qualification; but do not hesitate to say that it was the best representation of "Romeo and Juliet" we have anywhere seen in some years, or have ever seen in New-York at all.

Miss Neilson, to begin with, has excellent personal qualifications. She looks Juliet, and so prepossesses her public from the outset. But presently she shows that she has something richer and rarer still than mere personal beauty; that she has within her sparks of that "science-baffling star, without parallax, without calculable elements," which we call originality. The sweet naïveté, the flower-like freshness of her earlier scenes are very winning; and the blending of delicacy with tragic power exhibited thereafter is very impressive. The garden scene is good in point of not being stagy, in a girlish daintiness and reserve, charmingly varied by bursts of tenderness, and in always suggesting that atmosphere of refinement whereof the high-born daughter of Capulet should never be divested. Where womanly feeling is to be depicted afterward, when the storm of passion and of heartstricken sorrow is to be painted, Miss Neilson is at least as successful; she could hardly be more so. We do not forget that the lady has the signal advantage of being subject to absolutely no comparison whatever with predecessors. As we have said, there is and has been none here. But, making full allowance for this, the lady made, last night, an unequivocal and most gratifying impression. She was called before the curtain at the end of every act, and cheered with honest plaudits; and the flowers that were showered at her feet were not only more genuine, but far more appropriate tribute, than they usually are when cast across the footlights. An event like this warrants warm congratulations. The stage needs such events. Gaudy scenes, lascivious displays of the person, acrobatic monstrosities, and the clap-trap of melo-drama have usurped the theatre so grossly and so exclusively that it is truly refreshing to see those excrescences expelled for a space in favor of Shakespeare and genuine dramatic ability. Miss Neilson's Juliet as a whole is a performance of true merit, falling little short, if it so falls at all, of real genius; her fourth act rises to grandeur; and as such richly deserved the more than hospitable and chivalrous greeting it last night received.

We are unable to speak highly of Mr. Wheelock's Romeo. It is wofully lacking in fervor, in poetry of bearing, and even in courtliness of detail. Tameness on the stage sometimes insures inoffensiveness, and this is to some extent true of Mr. Wheelock's Romeo; only to some extent, however, since the gentleman obviously lacks thoroughness of study and clearness of perception to read the part correctly. In general, nevertheless, his performance is smooth, and Mr. Wheelock has a certain ease of movement and modesty that propitiates, if they cannot command, applause. Making allowance for the nervousness incident to a first Metropolitan appearance, we are willing to believe that Mr. Wheelock can improve on his Romeo hereafter; and we heartily wish that he may do so. It would be doing injustice to some of Mr. J. W. Wallack's impersonations to say that his Mercutio takes rank with the best of them. It is spirited and manly, but it can hardly be called airy or mercurial. Of jollity and bonhomie it has no lack, but of the quaint suppleness, the glib, rattling repartee of the Italian humorist, fine gentleman, and roysterer, Mr. Wallack hardly gives a perfect idea. The recklessness, the mirth, and the good heart are there, but the intellectual subtlety, the courtliness that fits as easy as a glove, the gossamer lightness of jest, of this very prince of gentlemen who ever chose to masquerade in cap and bells, are less clearly outlined. Measured by a high standard, that of his own best efforts, Mr. Wallack's Mercutio falls short; but it is much better than any other Mercutio we have lately seen here; it is free, bold, and picturesque; and it was certainly highly agreeable to the bulk of last night's audience. The remaining parts of the tragedy were fairly personated. Mr. Waller was correct and monotonous in the Friar, and the representative of Tybalt was duly morose and explosive. Miss Wells makes a tolerable Nurse, and the chiefs of the houses of Montague and Capulet were more like what they should be in dress and bearing than is usual. "Romeo and Juliet" was certainly much relished by the audience, and we have seen no spectacle of late that has been viewed with such steadfast interest.

Now that "Romeo and Juliet" is prominent once more in the public eye, we shall hear all the old talk about the tragedy which, with it, undergoes periodic revival. Retrospections of Fanny Kemble's triumphant début will be furbished up afresh. We shall hear again of Dryden's tradition; how Shakespeare said he had to kill Mercutio in the third act, lest the play should have been killed by him. We shall be told, once more, the saying of the old actress, how no woman can act Juliet until she is past forty—and so, is too old to look it. We shall be regaled yet again with the comparative merits of Garrick and "silver-tongued" Barry, and reminded that, whereas the former, in the balcony scene, looked as if he were going to jump up to Juliet, Barry looked as if he would infallibly make Juliet jump down to him. These things are all in order, and are all very well in their way. But there are other things that belong to no particular time, and to no particular set of opinions, which the production of "Romeo and Juliet"—at least with such a Juliet as Miss Neilson—may always more profitably suggest. There is the old lesson, of course, against the maintenance of family feuds—whether handed down in the lowly cabins of Corsican goat-herds or in the splendid palaces of Capulets and Montagues. The aristocratic vendetta, which, almost in a breath, vexed Escalus with "three civil brawls, bred of an airy word" has a moral as sharply pointed in New-York as in Verona. But it is not of this that we think when we read or see "Romeo and Juliet." The life and the soul of the play is not the hate of the old but the love of the young. It is deep and passionate and overwhelming love; the love which is tinged forever with a tender melancholy, since blighted before fruition—

> "As the bud bit with an envious worm,
> Ere he can spread his sweet leaves to the air
> Or dedicate his beauty to the sun."

Such is the sad fate of these Italian lovers. For we accept it as true, in the main, as Luigi da Porto, and Arthur Brooke, and Shakespeare, successively told it. They loved quickly, wildly, vainly—and perished. Their story, as looked at in the cold light of common sense, is a solemn warning against imprudent attachments; and yet it is a living, eternal glory to human nature, as well as to literature, which we would not have in the slightest detail other than it is. The reason is not, as Emerson says, because all the world loves a lover—although there is a great deal in that. It is because everyone having average brain and imagination knows that he is lifted nearer to the gods by the bare possibility of one of his race being capable of such exalted emotion. The passion of Romeo may be boyish; and yet it elevates all mankind. Humanity is the greater for every individual equal to such absolute devotion, ready to face death, or aught worse, for a grand idea. We do not forget Rosaline, Romeo's first love, or that indeed he goes to the feast, at Capulet's, where he first sees Juliet, really to see Rosaline. But what then? The ingenious improvers of Shakespeare think they do him and Romeo a good turn by cutting out this episode; and they must have mourned that they could not by any means, short of leaving her out entirely, make the Nurse other than, at once, "loquacious and secret, obsequious and insolent, trusty and dishonest." It is a fine thing, no doubt, to dislike paradox and to cleave to consistency. But the effort to exemplify these dispositions often gives birth to exactly what those who make it most wish to avoid. Of course, Romeo was ready to fall in love. The most luxuriant flowers grow in the richest soil. He certainly fancied himself in love with Rosaline. But we know it was only fancy, just as we know the tremendous reality of his subsequent feeling for Juliet. To say that this is out of nature, or "inconsistent," is nonsense. We even question whether, morally speaking, it is blameworthy. A thirsty traveler, wandering in the desert, comes to a spring. He sips at it, turns away, and comes directly to another. At the latter he drinks copious draughts, and is content. But the world is not. It cries out in a rage that he is insincere, and that he had no honest craving to slake his thirst at all. Those, however, who know that the traveler found the first spring salt and the second sweet, know better. They know that he sought what he wanted, and passed on until he got it. However, in the "acting edition" of our tragedy, the first spring has no place, and we may fitly confine present comments to what is immediately under review. As regards common interest in the sublime emotion, its chief theme, we may be sure of universal sympathy.

We shall hear with satisfaction that "Romeo and Juliet," as thus worthily rendered, has continued success at Booth's Theatre. For it teaches, with better than common skill, a kind of lesson our current society is in great need of, and teaches it in the tongue that is and ever will be universal. All, even of the loneliest and saddest of humanity, can understand the speech of that paradise. Goropius published at Antwerp, in 1580, a treatise to prove that the tongue spoken in Eden was his own vernacular; but, whether Dutch or Sanskrit, whether that of the Vedas or of Moses, we may be certain that it was the language of Love.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

The sensational drama entitled "Dixie, or Our Colored Brother," was reproduced at this establishment last evening, the principal character being taken by Mr. Johnny Thompson, and the cast comprising the whole strength of the company. We have already written concerning the piece, which contains an abundance of songs and much good dialogue, and gives opportunity for the display of Mr. Thompson's saltatory powers and musical abilities. It is only necessary to say here that "Our Colored Brother" was well received last evening by one of the largest audiences ever gathered in the establishment during this season. At the matinées this week, "The Silver Demon" will be acted until further notice.

Musical.

"IL TROVATORE" AT TERRACE GARDEN.

The opening of the Terrace Garden Theatre was in every sense a success. The interior of the building has been simply but tastefully decorated, and is arranged in the form of a concert hall, rather than in the conventional shape of a theatre. The walls and ceiling are painted white, with pickings of gold, while the red curtains on the sides add warmth and pleasantness to the general effect. The opera selected for the occasion was "Il Trovatore," and the performance, with the exception of a few small irregularities incident to a first public trial, was eminently satisfactory. Mme. Lichtmay, who took the part of Leonore, was in excellent voice, and though she seemed, in the earlier part of the evening, somewhat under constraint, during the latter portion this passed off, and in the duet in the tower scene she received a most enthusiastic encore. Miss Perl acted her part to perfection, but her vocalization was hardly equal to the part. The new tenor, Wilhelm Horn, has a strong and clear, if not a sympathetic voice. His range of chest notes is limited, but he uses falsetto, when called upon, with great advantage and effect. This was particularly noticeable in "Lodern zum Himmel sah ich die Flamme" which raised the audience into momentary excitement. Fritz de la Fontaine proved an able representative of Count Luna. His voice, though weak in the lower notes, is firm and true in the higher range, while in stage-carriage the actor is infinitely superior to Horn. The chorus was admirable, and in this respect in striking contrast with that sometimes heard at the Italian opera. A strong objection may be made to the orchestra, from the fact that it was much too powerful for both the size of the hall and the capabilities of the performers. Often, in the lower passages, the voices were entirely drowned by the force of the wind instruments. Considerable improvement may be made in the scenery, where there is now far too much clustering of green. As a whole, however, little fault can be found, and the large audience expressed itself thoroughly satisfied with the performance.

Miscellaneous.

BARNUM'S GREAT SHOW.

Mr. Barnum opened his great show last evening at the Hippotheatron, in Fourteenth-street, to an immense audience. The iron tent so long occupied by Mr. Lent and his circus has been greatly enlarged and improved. The ground floor has been sunken, and room gained for a spacious gallery, this doubling the seating capacity of the edifice. The interior of the arena is very handsomely fitted up, and it affords ample scope for the daring feats of Mr. Castello's company. A new apartment has been arranged outside of the arena, where the animals and curiosities are placed on exhibition. Lions, tigers, elephants, camels, leopards, sea lions and giraffes occupy the cages and stalls, besides a large variety of other rare specimens from the forests of different countries. There are no less than four giraffes, which proved the centre of attraction in the menagerie. The features of the performances in the ring were some very clever carpet gymnasts. Lizelle and Millson also executed several difficult and dangerous feats on the ladder trapeze. Messrs. James Melville and George Donald distinguished themselves in bare-backed horsemanship, while the other acts were all good. Mr. Castello has displayed much taste in the trappings, uniforms, and properties, they being both costly and handsome.

The Irish-Anderson Poisoning Case—A New Indictment Found.

The trial of Dr. Lucius B. Irish, impleaded with Mrs. Sarah A. Anderson, in an indictment for the murder by poisoning of Assistant Assessor Edward O. Anderson, was yesterday postponed by consent until the second Monday in December, on account of the difficulty in getting the numerous witnesses wanted by the defense. Dr. Irish and Mrs. Anderson will have separate trials. The District-Attorney says the trial will occupy nearly a whole week. The Grand Jury now in session have found a new indictment against Dr. Irish, charging him solely with the poisoning of Mr. Anderson. The accused was arraigned yesterday in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, and pleaded not guilty to this indictment.

The Donellan Murder.

Coroner Reinhardt, yesterday afternoon, held an inquest on the body of Thomas Donellan, who was shot by John Doris in Roche's saloon, Henderson-street, Jersey City, on Friday morning. The jury returned a verdict that Donellan came to his death by shooting at the hands of Doris. Doris was not present at the inquest. Coroner Reinhardt applied to the Court for permission to take him from the jail, but the Court thought it unnecessary, as he had been fully committed by Justice Keese, and refused permission unless some question regarding his identity should arise.

The Methodist Missionary Association.

The Methodist Missionary Association assembled again yesterday morning at No. 805 Broadway, for the purpose of making additional appropriations. Ten thousand dollars for the support and continuance of the mission at Bombay, and $10,000 for the new mission at Canton, China, were appropriated, making a total for the ensuing year of $665,000. A session was held at 3½ P. M., in the Seventh-avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. Bishop E. S. Janes was elected President, and thirty-two clergymen and the same number of laymen appointed as officers and managers for the ensuing year. At 8 P. M. the church was crowded. Addresses were delivered by Bishops Harris and Merril, Drs. Dashiel, Holdich, and Gen. Clinton B. Fisk.

THOMAS HOOD.

Lecture by George Macdonald at Steinway Hall Last Evening.

The first of a series of lectures organized at the request of many of the patrons of the Mercantile Library Association, for the purpose of increasing the funds for the purchase of books, as well as of offering to the public a series of first-class entertainments, was delivered last evening, at Steinway Hall, by Mr. George Macdonald, upon the subject of "Thomas Hood."

The hall was crowded with an attentive audience, and there were on the platform Dr. Bellows, Dr. Ormiston, Dr. Adams, Dr. Osgood, Judge Lawrence, Hon. Judge Daly, Hon. Thos. E. Stewart, Judge Kirkland, W. H. Guion, and many others.

Dr. J. G. Holland, in introducing the lecturer to the audience, said he had the singular pleasure of presenting to them a stranger with whom they were all well acquainted, to a person whom they had all learned to love as a brother, and an alien whom he was sure felt deeply impressed with the honor of his post.

Mr. Macdonald, in opening his discourse, said he had the honor of appearing before them as a would-be interpreter, if that were necessary, but certainly, in part, as attempting to be the introducer of Thomas Hood, a man far better known than to need any introduction; but still so precarious was the human mind that it became one of man's chief duties to act as a kind of mediator between the characters which they had seen and the minds of those who had not any special acquaintance with them. A lady once told him that she had asked a friend in a crowded room who "that very quiet-looking man was," and to her surprise she was told it was Thomas Hood. One could not be much surprised at this, indeed, for although many of his writings were so humorous, yet Hood was not the kind of man he might be supposed to be by those who had an acquaintance with him only from the most amusing portions of his writings. But he felt that Hood was more distinguished as a poet of pathos than he was of humor; yet some of the most humorous things the man ever wrote were written when he was unable to leave his bed, and it was rare, indeed, that we could find a man like Hood, so content that he could pursue his ordinary calling for the sake of his family, when for his own part he would willingly give it all up. One could not help laughing heartily on reading Hood's humorous productions. There were many kinds of laughter, but the best laugh of all was the one that we laughed together. They would find that all the laughing that Hood's writings cause us was all on the side of friendliness, while there was nothing vulgar in any of his utterances. And with regard to humor. Let them take the lowest kind of humor—punning—and suppose an admirably fitting pun was perpetrated in our hearing, it did not follow that we must laugh, possibly a smile was all that we should give—perhaps we should only give a kind of natural assent. But sometimes a very bad pun would make us shriek with laughter, possibly from its badness; but a good pun should have something to connect it with the simplicities of nature. The true poet was the one that most revealed us to each other. Having thus prefaced his lecture, he would give a specimen of Hood's fun, and show that, although he was best known as a comic writer, he was also a real poet, and that, if he had never written anything comic, he was worthy of a place among the first poets; and he would also endeavor to show them some of his best humor and pathos by means of his poems. "Sally Brown" was one of his most humorous writings, and although Hood meant it for fun, it appeared to him to be full of pathos. Let them reflect for a moment on the exquisite confusion in the last verse of that poem. Sailors, in that period, wore their hair put up in pig-tails, and the head of the unfortunate individual alluded to being turned, he was able to "chew it till he died," [laughter;] and, yet, Hood had the gift of putting his pen to serious purposes. Now, his idea was that no man could be said to be thoroughly at home with his subject until he could play with it, and there might be two ways even of jesting with serious things. There were some men who could jest without giving offense, while it would shock us to hear others jest about the same thing. There was a way of making fun without losing our reverence. There were many people who were opposed to being taught anything—they resented it—and it had been ably and truly said that the surest way to offend some people was to tell them something that they do not know about. Thomas Hood, however, taught us all mirth. Turning to Thomas Hood as a poet, he said there was no evidence in "Sally Brown" that Hood was a poet, but there was proof elsewhere that he was a poet, and that he could sing, and many of Hood's songs showed that he had the real harmony of words. It was possible for a song to have too much thought impressed into it, and to so far fail to be a thoroughly good song; but Hood's were all perfect. His celebrated ballad, which commenced "Spring was cheery, Winter was dreary," &c., was a ballad which was very remarkable as having been written with the feelings of the man who was at his best when associated with humor. It was clear that that ballad was intended to be a melancholy one, and it was clear also that when Hood was alone with himself, all laughter left him to sit alone with his sad thoughts. His poem opening upon the Autumn was one of a similar character, in which there appeared to be an absence of thought, and was written more to express his mournful feelings than for any other especial point. His method of conveying his feelings was admirable. Then in his "Ruth" the expression he gave to the lines was admirable, and as they read them they could almost picture the girl before them. The lecturer then referred to Hood's melancholy writings, in which he seemed to exhibit expressions of hope, and said he did not think any poem, he did not care how melancholy, should be without some tinge of hope. In conclusion, he called attention to those admirable lines, written for the benefit of an overworked class—the seamstresses—and through which he believed much good had resulted. He then recited the celebrated lines, "Stitch, stitch, stitch," which was greeted with much applause. The lecturer returned thanks to the audience for their close attention and retired.

COLORADO IN AUTUMN.

BY GRACE GREENWOOD.

GREELEY, Colorado, Tuesday, Nov. 5, 1872.

It is odd to be here, of all places in the Territory, on this day, of all days in the year—day "big with the fate of Cæsar and of Rome"—day which is to decide forever the fortunes of that eminent citizen whose name is identified with this noble young colony. A more peaceful retreat could scarcely be found at this eventful and tumultuous time, by a quiet, unenfranchised citizen like your correspondent. Not a surge of popular excitement penetrates to these flat shores—not an echo of the roar of the great conflict rouses or vexes our souls. Even the Liberals, though anticipating the defeat of their party in the States, do not seem as much cast down as you would expect. After all, it is "none of their funeral." The old Happy Valley of Rasselas could hardly seem more shut away from the world of political strife and aspiration than this busy young town, with tributary rivers and vast snowy mountains on one side of it, and railways and an infinity of sky and plain on the other. Here men and women are today on an absolute equality, an equality of "no consequence" to the State. Here man and wife do not even count one. I rather like it—it is good discipline for the men.

I have now spent more than a month in Colorado—more than a month of determined and unmitigated idleness. I came in search of the health lost in your dreadful Eastern Summer, and have, I trust, found it. But though returning strength has brought with it constant and almost ungovernable impulses toward outdoor life, wandering and climbing, and vagabondizing generally, it brings no inclination toward mental exertion of any kind. "I kin work, but I don't hanker arter it," in this bracing, bright, resplendent Autumn sunshine, and under these deep, sparkling, frosty November nights.

It was on the 1st of October that we left Chicago. We had just been visited by a severe storm, and the air, both of lake and prairie, had a peculiar vindictive sharpness and rawness that cut into weak lungs savagely, and pierced to the very marrow of one's bones. It was not till we passed the Missouri that the chill and the dampness quite disappeared, and the air, though cool, became balmy—at night "frosty, but kindly,"—at the same time exhilarating and soothing. Courage came back to me on every invisible wave of the boundless aerial sea of the plains. I was again content with this world—the goodly, broad, generous world—I was inclined to take stock in this life once more. Colorado still looked beautiful to me, though "wildly clad" in russet brown. Every faintest green tinge had died out of the rough turf. Every flower had gone under, except an occasional belated poppy—the snows had descended on Long's Peak and lovely Mount Rosalie, and here and there on all the great range, adding the last unimagined glory to the splendors of sunset and sunrise.

After a few days of delicious rest in Denver, we made an excursion to Boulder City and explored Boulder Cañon, the most beautiful of all the wonderful cañons of Colorado. I had seen it last in Midsummer, when the river was high and its banks green and flowery. Now the scene seemed almost new. The Autumnal tints of the foliage, every shade of red and gold and brown were absolutely transporting—a feast, an ecstacy, an intoxication of the sight. And then the mighty, majestic rocks on either side, softened by clinging vines, mosses, and lichens, and made beautiful and precious by faithful, adventurous pines, climbing up everywhere, from base to summit. We drove up some twelve miles, and picnicked in a lovely spot, in full sight of the magnificent "Castle Rock." Ah, the pictures above and around and beneath us!—precipice and pinnacle of gray granite, with rich purple shades—dark pines, and silver cedars, and golden willows—and, at our feet, the swift, bright stream, with its foaming rapids and fairy cascades. It was a scene as impossible to discribe as to forget. It had about it a sort of august and sacred loveliness and loneliness. The spirit of that serene mountain solitude was solemn, yet glad. The golden autumnal silence praised God.

In strong contrast to Boulder is Clear Creek Cañon, up which runs the Colorado Central Narrow Gauge. We revisited this with an excursion party of journalists and railroad people, the guests of the superintendent and chief engineer, Mr. Sickels. The trip by rail was from Golden City to the present terminus of the road, some seven miles below Central. It was a wonderful little expedition. I do not believe that there is any where else in the railroad kingdom, eighteen consecutive miles of such grand and peculiar scenery. Streams and waterfalls, and tremendous boulders, mountains rising above mountains, sombre and monstrous shapes, brooding sullenly over yet undiscovered and unimagined treasure, hid in their hard secret hearts, and the rocks that walled us in—rocks riven asunder in some awful, immemorial convulsion—rocks in domes, and towers, and turrets, and bastions, and vast vertical precipices; rocks daintily festooned by vines, white with the fleecy tufts of the clambering clematis; rocks toiled over by straggling processions of pines: rocks black, savage and bare, save where far up, in hollows and crevices, the first snow of the mild Autumn rested and gleamed in the midday sunlight.

The road itself, that triumph over the faithless and unbelieving, was a perpetual marvel to us all—with its skillful doubling of bold capes, its curves and cuts and convolutions. The day was so mild and still that we found an "observation car" quite comfortable, while giving us admirable opportunities for seeing everything on our way. Ours was a special train, and not heavily freighted, yet the sturdy little engine toiled up the steep grade with much ado, puffing and panting and wheezing in an asthmatic way, which was really quite distressing. The fame of this bold, picturesque route, the peculiar sombre beauty of this cañon, now first made accessible to tourists, will secure for the little pioneer mountain road a great amount of Summer travel, and already its business is more than it can well dispose of. When its continuations and tributaries are completed, trains will follow each other up and down this cañon like the curious processions of ants we have watched on Summer days, moving continuously up and down a wall or a tree, with never a break or a collision.

This road will be completed to Blackhawk, about a mile below Central City, by the 1st of January. Then will begin its great traffic, conveying ore to Golden and Denver to be smelted and crushed, and carrying coal and merchandise to Central; and when the other proposed routes to Idaho, Georgetown, and to the new and rich silver mines of the South Park, are completed, will begin Colorado's great days. Then she will come into possession of her magnificent birthright—her imperial inheritance—hid away for ages of ages in the mysterious treasure-vaults of nature. Then, too, will agriculture receive new impulse and inspiration. The rivers must send forth their missionaries of fruitfulness and verdure, and lace the land with irrigating canals. The brown plains will be tapped with wells, and the prairie winds, wild and idle since the creation, will be set to work to turn those picturesque mills, whose mission it will be to transform the desert into a garden of delight, of matchless melons and monstrous cabbages, beets, onions, and pumpkins, and turnips, such as New-England farmers never dream of, even after a Thanksgiving dinner. It is easy to see that this system of narrow-gauge railroads—the only system practicable in these mountains—will enrich this country, add materially to the wealth of the whole country, and not be a bad thing for the parties particularly engaged in it. The Union Pacific Railroad Company are men wise in their generation. They know when the harvest of golden opportunity is ripe, and just where to thrust in their keen Sickels. I am grieved to find some bitter jealousies and animosities existing in this exalted region, especially between little Golden City and my beloved Denver, on the new railroad question. But I trust the great Company are too shrewd as well as too just to leave Denver out in the cold. For uniting rival towns and provinces, there are no ties like railroad-ties.

The weather in Colorado was, all through October, brilliant, dry, and warm—too warm sometimes for comfort in the middle of the day. The contrast between day and night we found a little too sharp. For that reason I do not think Denver, or any of the mountain towns, the best place for invalids during the Autumn and Winter. Of all the points in the Territory I have yet visited, I think Manitou Springs, near the mouth of Fountain Cañon, decidedly the safest and pleasantest spot for an invalid. It is sheltered from the sharp winds, yet sufficiently open to the sunlight; it has a great deal of foliage, yet is singularly cheerful: it is near the grand mountains, yet is not darkly domineered over by them. There is there now a beautiful, comfortable, and home-like hotel, admirably managed, which is to be kept open all Winter for the special benefit of invalids. Friends of ours, who spent last Winter in this neighborhood, give enthusiastic accounts of the mild and brilliant weather, and the pure, bracing air, which kept them and their young children in perfect health and joyous spirits all through the season—a season exceptionally cold and stormy in the northern part of the territory. People who come to Colorado for their health make, I am assured, a grave mistake in leaving with the Summer. If they find themselves benefited at all by the air and the altitude, they should remain through the Autumn, at least, and then, if still better, try the Winter.

The finest grounds about the Springs have been laid out in villa lots, and are rapidly being built upon, so the time is not distant when Manitou will be not only the loveliest spot in this lovely wild land, but a thronged and fashionable watering-place.

The railroad ride from Colorado Springs to Denver we found almost as delightful as in the Summer; but, after all, it was tame compared with the stage ride we took, a few days later, from Central to Georgetown, over a wonderful mountain road.

We set out from Central on a breezy but sunny day, under a heavy press of parasol; we reached Georgetown amid darkness, cold, rain, and snow. But the morning dawned brightly, and we enjoyed to the utmost our brief visit to that queen of the old mining towns. We took advantage of every burst of sunlight, we drove and walked in the teeth of the keen wind, and took horseback excursions under the gray wings of hovering snow storms, and when we departed the Winter seemed closing in upon the town, sweeping down the dark cañons, and the whole grand mountain and valley picture was something to look back upon with a thrill of admiration, also of joy, at having safely run the blockade. By the way, they are having at Georgetown what they call an "ore blockade." The mines have got out more ore than they can dispose of by sale at paying prices, or by reducing, though the mills are crushing, and the smelting works fuming like so many infernos day and night. Here, as in other mining towns, "the whole creation groaneth and travaileth" together for the happy day of railroad facilities. But I shall be sorry to see even the pretty passenger-cars of the "baby railroad" supersede the admirable stage-coaches of this most picturesque mountain route. Life will have lost much of its savor when we can hope to sit no more on the lofty box, beside pleasant Hiram Washburn, and watch his splendid handling of his handsome six-horse team, and hear his jokes and stories, look over mountain and valley, away and away, and drink in the heavenly air, and peer down occasionally on the inside passengers, getting all the dust and little of the prospect. It is the very bliss and triumph of traveling.

We found sunny, sheltered Idaho still attractive, though almost deserted by visitors. The bright, cosy parlor of the Beebe House looked so precisely as it did during my summer visit of last year, that I looked round involuntarily for the pleasant friends that there used to gather for long, merry evenings. Alas, they are widely scattered, and one young girl, whose sweet, yearning face had a look, even then, of having done with all earthly things, except love, has since passed through a valley more shadowy and yet more peaceful than this, and stood on more delectable mountains than these, and is now breathing an air that has in it no faintest taint of mortal decay, no threatening of Winter, no chill of death.

We leave for the East next week, and, late as it is, we leave with regret. The weather has been thus far so almost miraculously beautiful and bright, and the air of the day of so divine a quality, that in every way we feel "it is good to be here." In this transparent air, the views, both from Denver and here, of the snowy peaks and domes on the vast range, are marvelously grand and uplifting, especially at sunset and sunrise. And the tawny earth, in the wide, still plain that weds the sky in the utterly-level horizon, like a sea becalmed, and in those grand, ground-swells that reach the purple foot-hills, has a beauty of its own—a stern, grave, uncompromising beauty, which seems to say, "Nature and the grand forms she first created, mighty, unsubdued creatures, were content with me, and I am content with myself. Better to be the free waste of God—the pasture of his wild flocks, the racing-ground of his winds—than the garden of man, fenced and ditched and harrowed and burdened."

I dread to think how we shall miss this sense of magnificent altitude, of infinite roominess, when we get down home, by the Potomac, into the damp, low region of fogs and politics—where we can only get views of river or hills, in street-wide vistas, and aggravating glimpses of sunset over the French roof of the gloomy Coast Survey.

Rough and Tumble Experiences in California.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage lectured last evening at the Fifty-third-street Methodist Episcopal Church before a large audience on "Rough and Tumble Experiences in California." In a lecture of upward of an hour's duration Mr. Talmage described his experiences of a recent journey to California, portraying with much vigor of expression the beauty and grandeur of the scenery afforded by a trip across the continent. In a highly humorous manner he contrived to convey a vast amount of information in his lecture, dwelling particularly on a narrative of life in Mormondom, the manners of its people, and its form of government. His description of the Yosemite Valley and his predictions of the future of California, based upon its unlimited resources, were particularly interesting, and were eagerly listened to. The whole lecture was plentifully interspersed with amusing and instructive incidents, which drew forth loud and constant applause.

Steam Safes in the Boston Fire.

NEW-YORK, Nov. 18, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As showing the superior character of the American Patent Steam Safes, we select the following from about a hundred letters and telegrams of like import:

S. H. COLE, Manager.

To S. H. Cole, Manager American Steam Safe Company, No. 300 Broadway, New-York:

DEAR SIR: I had one of your steam safes, containing money, books, and accounts of great value, in my paper warehouse, corner of High and Federal streets, containing 580 to 600 tons of combustible merchandise. I had perfect faith in the safe, which was exposed to an intense heat for more than fifty hours; still, I was thoroughly surprised, and no less gratified, to find that it was as good as new inside when cut open after the fire. Several safes of other makes around me had their contents totally destroyed. How any one can hesitate for a moment to have the protection which you give in your safes over and above other modes of constructing them, passes my comprehension. Please make me a No. 10 of your latest pattern as soon as possible.

Yours very truly,

EDWIN H. SAMPSON, Paper Dealer,
Corner of High and Federal streets.

BOSTON, Nov. 14, 1872.

INSURANCE.

NORTH BRITISH AND MERCANTILE INSURANCE COMPANY OF LONDON AND EDINBURGH.

OFFICE,
NO. 50 WILLIAM-ST., NEW-YORK.

This Company having passed through the Chicago and Boston conflagrations with heavy losses, which have been and will be met promptly, without materially reducing the large Fire Reserve of the Company, which is still over feels called upon to take a firm stand for the safety of the public and itself.

The recent disasters prove the necessity of Large Reserves and immense resources to meet similar emergencies; to secure these, adequate rates of premium must be obtained, and large collective liabilities must be assumed with great caution.

Our system of liabilities in all the large cities in the United States, which has proved so successful both in the Chicago and Boston conflagrations, is such that no one conflagration can occur to seriously impair the resources of this Company, and no one which shall equal Chicago and Boston combined, will absorb the Fire Reserve and Surplus. It is on this basis that we can assure the public of entire security, and nothing shall cause us to deviate from it. Such a pledge makes the policies of this Company worth any reasonable rates.

We can no longer tamper with inadequate rates of premiums, which have proved the destruction of so many fire insurance companies, and occasioned such disappointment and loss to the assured. Believing that the great mass of insurers are fully persuaded as to the wisdom of our position, we shall be happy to transact business with them on the terms proposed, and we invite the active co-operation of all reliable companies.

Errors having been made in publishing losses of insurance companies by the fire in Boston, the President and Directors of this Company deem it expedient and proper to inform the public that the whole amount of risks this Company has in the burnt district in Boston is $104,000; that if this amount is a total loss, the Company will pay it promptly and still have a handsome surplus remaining over and above its capital. THIS ROAD, WITH THE CANADA SOUTHERN, FORMS THE NEW TRUNK AIR-LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO. IT IS UNDER THE SAME CONTROL AND MANAGEMENT, AND IS BEING BUILT BY THE SAME PARTIES WHO BUILT THE CANADA SOUTHERN; MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN F. TRACY, DAVID DOWS, WILLIAM L. SCOTT, HENRY FARNAM, R. A. FORSYTH, JOHN M. BURKE, M. L. SYKES, JR., ALL DIRECTORS BOTH IN THE CHICAGO AND NORTH-WEST AND THE CHICAGO AND ROCK ISLAND; GEORGE OPDYKE, OF THE NEW-YORK MIDLAND; SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, SAMUEL J. TILDEN, KENYON COX, AND OTHER PROMINENT RAILROAD MEN. THE ROAD IS BEING RAPIDLY BUILT IN THE BEST POSSIBLE MANNER, WITH SIXTY-POUND STEEL RAILS THROUGHOUT ITS ENTIRE LINE, AND WILL BE COMPLETED DURING THE COMING YEAR; NEARLY ONE-HALF OF THE ROAD WILL BE COMPLETED AND IN RUNNING ORDER BY THE 1ST OF JANUARY NEXT, SO THAT THE ENTIRE LINE, FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, WILL, WITHIN THAT TIME, BE IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION. THE BUILDERS OF THIS ROAD CONTROL ENOUGH OF THE LEADING LINES RUNNING FROM CHICAGO TO INSURE AN ENORMOUS BUSINESS FROM THE START. TAKING INTO CONSIDERATION THE IMPORTANT FACT, PATENT TO ALL WHO STUDY THE STATISTICS OF TRADE, THAT THE PRESENT TRUNK LINES, NOW TAXED TO THEIR UTMOST CAPACITY, ARE NOT AFFORDING FACILITIES EQUAL TO THE GREAT AND CONSTANTLY-INCREASING DEMAND FOR TRANSPORTATION, AND THAT THIS ROAD, THROUGH ITS ENTIRE LENGTH, BEING PRACTICALLY STRAIGHT AND LEVEL AND SHORTER BY THIRTY-FIVE MILES THAN BY ANY OTHER NOW BUILT, OR THAT CAN BE BUILT, it must be apparent that this line is not only needed, but must be a great success. The proceeds of these Bonds will complete and equip the entire road, and we confidently recommend them as a most safe and profitable investment.

Sixteen miles of the Road are finished and in operation, 44 miles in addition fully graded, and a total length of 55 miles of track will be laid this season, while the whole Road, of about 150 miles, with the exception of 5 miles of easy work, is entered upon and contracted to be finished by responsible and wealthy parties within the ensuing year.

The Road will extend from the City of Oswego to Lewiston, on the Niagara River, with branches to Suspension Bridge and Buffalo, connecting at its Western terminus with the Great Western, the Canada Southern, and the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroads, and at Oswego with the New-York Midland, and by way of the Midland with the proposed Boston, Rome and Oswego Railroad, which, when built, will thus provide a route from Chicago to Boston, 70 miles shorter than by any existing or contemplated line; connecting also at Oswego with the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg Railroad, and thence by the Vermont Central it completes connection with the entire railroad system of Northern New-England; while connections at Oswego with the Syracuse and Oswego Railroad, secures access to the coal fields of Pennsylvania.

ANOTHER MURDER.

Tragic Ending of Proceedings in a Divorce Case.

A Well-Known Detective Shot by a Lawyer.

A Complete History of the Crime, and the Parties Thereto.

The Story Told by the Murderer while in the Police Station.

A shocking and wholly unprovoked murder was committed in this City yesterday afternoon, the details of the crime revealing a sad story of immorality and domestic difficulty. The murdered man was well known as a detective on the Erie Railway, and his slayer had been conspicuous in Wall-street until quite recently.

A referee case was being heard before ex-Judge Josiah Sutherland, in a suit for divorce between Anna E. King and James C. King. The examination was held in Mr. Sutherland's office, on the third floor of the building No. 42 Pine-street, where, among other witnesses, Mr. Anthony F. O'Neil, the murdered man, was one. He had testified against the moral conduct and character of Mr. King, and when the case was adjourned for the day all of the parties and witnesses in the suit began to leave the office. O'Neil was going down the stairs first, being accompanied by his wife, who had also given her evidence. A Miss Froude, another witness, was also with him. As these three persons were going down the staircase to the second floor, intending to pass on to the street, they were all considerably startled by the sudden and unexpected discharge of a pistol, evidently fired on the landing above. At the sound of the report O'Neil turned round on his heel and looked up the stairs, when a second and third shot were fired, one of which entered the unfortunate man's right breast, between the first and second ribs, and took an oblique course, which could not be detected by the probe. Another shot passed through O'Neil's hat, and struck the wall at the side of the staircase, the third hitting the left-hand casing of the window looking out on Pine-street from the foot of that flight of stairs. The murderer then turned round and walked upstairs, while the victim continued down to the landing, and passed along the hallway of the second floor. The door of the office of Teunis W. Quick, a broker, situated on the north-western corner of this floor, having been opened by the occupants to ascertain the cause of the shooting, attracted O'Neil's attention, and he walked toward it in company with his wife. On entering the room O'Neil said to Mr. Quick, "I've been shot," and was immediately admitted within the railing of the office, and accommodated with a chair. As there did not seem to be any signs of blood, Mr. Quick at first thought O'Neil was mistaken; but soon after he exhibited evidences of faintness, and was laid down on the floor in the centre of the room, where he soon after died from internal hemorrhage. The location of the wound was then found, as above described.

The murderer, after firing the shots, returned into the office of Mr. Sutherland, and approaching him, said: "Here, Judge; I have settled it." He then handed him a five-barreled silver-plated revolver, three chambers of which had been recently discharged. Mr. Sutherland told those who were in the office to look after King, and went out in search of an officer. King then concealed himself in an inner room, and locked the door, so that when Mr. Sutherland returned with Officer Gibney, the murderer was nowhere to be seen. Mr. Sutherland then remembered the inner room, and, suggesting that he might be there, tried the door, only to find it locked. He then tried to force it, but without avail; but the officer broke it open and found King inside. He then claimed King as his prisoner, and after searching his clothing for other weapons, took him to the New-street Police Station, where, in answer to the usual questions, he said his name was James C. King, aged thirty-three, by profession a lawyer, and residing at No. 140 East Seventeenth-street. This name and address, however, does not appear in the City Directory, nor does it appear in the list of lawyers in the Business Directory.

HISTORY OF THE CASE.

To understand the causes that indirectly led to this tragedy, it will be necessary to go back several months. King and his wife, Anna E. King, had lived unhappily together for two or three years, the result being a suit on the part of the wife against her husband for a divorce. The ground upon which the action was based was stated to be brutality on the part of the defendant, though when the proceedings were fairly opened before Judge Barrett, some time last Summer, the charge of adultery was also added by the complainant in her affidavit. The action was met on the part of the husband by a denial of the allegations made in the complaint, besides counter-charges of adultery on the part of his wife. While these proceedings were progressing in regular order a new question came up, namely, the proper custody of the three children. At that time they resided with their father, so application was recently made to Judge Barrett by Mrs. King, the mother, for an order awarding to her the custody of the children, pending a decision in that Court for divorce. This motion led to further affidavits and counter motions, the parties to the suit being much incensed against each other. The sworn statements presented to Judge Barrett contained matter tending to show on their face that both parties were improper persons to have the custody of the unfortunate children. In this dilemma, the Court decided to refer the question of custody to ex-Judge Sutherland, with orders for him to hear all of the evidence to be presented on both sides, and report upon the same, with his opinion as to the relative fitness of the contestants to have custody of the children.

The following is a copy of the order:

At a special term of the Supreme Court of the State of New-York, held at the new County Court-house in the City of New-York on the 31st day of August, present Hon. George C. Barrett, Justice.—Anna E. King against James C. King.—A motion having been made on the part of the plaintiff for the custody of the children of said plaintiff and defendant pending the determination of this action. On reading and filing the petition of Anna E. King, the affidavits of Elizabeth Brannen, Jesse E. Zolk, Frank J. Dupignac, and Anna E. King, and the order to show cause granted thereon on the 19th day of August, 1872, on the part of the plaintiff, and the affidavits of James C. King, Joseph Zommed, Agnes Gray, Marianna Zorman, Jacob L. Redner, Philip H. Von Buren and George H. McCann on the part of the defendant. After hearing Frank J. Dupignac, counsel for the plaintiff in support of the motion, and Aaron J. Vanderpoel, Esq., counsel for the defendant, in opposition thereto,

It is ordered that this motion be referred to Josiah Sutherland, Esq., counselor at law, as referee, to take proofs of the facts and matters alleged in said petition, and to report the same, with his opinion thereon, with all convenient speed. And it is further ordered that the injunction heretofore granted on this motion be and the same is hereby dissolved.

Upon the coming in of the referee's report the application for the care and custody of the children to be brought on again upon such report, and the proofs thereto annexed upon three days' notice.

Indorsed—a copy, filed Aug. 31, 1872.

CHAS. E. LOEW, Clerk.

THE MURDERER AND HIS VICTIM.

The prisoner, King, is a man about five feet eight inches in height, very slightly built, of fair complexion, with light moustache, and hair of a reddish tinge. He seems to be one of those who could keep a cool exterior under any excitement, and who could maintain a stolid silence and indifference when it suited him, no matter what might be his internal agitation. This was particularly manifested yesterday in his conduct.

The unfortunate man who was shot appeared to be about thirty-five years of age, five feet ten inches in height, rather slight, hair and moustache inclined to be dark, and from his attire seemed to be in moderately good circumstances, although there was nothing on his person to indicate anything beyond mere comfort. His face did not show any evidence of evil passions or dissipation. He was an employe of the Erie Railroad, and had acted as detective.

KING'S CONDUCT IN THE POLICE STATION.

The murderer, upon being taken to the Police Station, after answering the questions put to him by the Sergeant at the desk, began to walk up and down the room, at the same time preserving a cool and collected demeanor. He had a black, gold-headed cane in his hand, and as he paced the floor he used this cane in about the same manner that any ordinary person would do while walking through the street. Not the slightest excitement was visible in his face, and as he turned in the direction of the entrance door, he gave an occasional glance toward the crowd of boys gathered on the outside of the station. He, however, made no remark, and continued to walk to and fro. No one would have suspected by his manner that he was under arrest for so serious a charge as murder. Soon after the body of his victim was brought in on a stretcher, and carried through the office to the rear of the building. The remains were, at this time, covered with a white cloth, and King glanced at the bearers and their burden in a very composed way, as if it did not concern him in the least. He next took off his overcoat and left it, with his cane, in the possession of the Sergeant at the desk. He was then ordered to be taken to his cell, to reach which he had to pass the place where the body had been deposited. At this time the dead man's face lay exposed to view, and King, as he passed, turned his head and looked at his victim without a muscle of his own features changing. He was then placed in his cell, and an officer detailed to keep guard over him while in the charge of the Police. After being locked up, he stolidly refused to say a word to any person as to the cause of his rash act, and when Coroner Keenan asked him why he shot O'Neil, he answered that "he had sent to his lawyer, and declined to say anything about the case." In all other instances, when spoken to, he maintained an unbroken silence during the whole of yesterday afternoon.

THE POLICE STATION AND PINE-STREET.

The news had no sooner become known that King was taken to the New-street Police Station than a crowd gathered about the building, and it required the active efforts of several police officers to keep the people from forcing their way into the office. The door was, however, kept closed, and none admitted but those who had business with the Police. Among the persons admitted was one who recognized King as an old acquaintance and school-mate, and said this was not the first shooting case in which he had been concerned.

At the scene of the tragedy, No. 42 Pine-street, the rush of people was so great that an officer had to be kept at the foot of the steps to prevent those who were merely actuated by curiosity from entering the building. Even with this precaution, the stairway from the second to the third floor, and the hall-ways, were so crowded that it was difficult to pass, and all sorts of speculations were indulged in as to where the unfortunate man stood when he was shot, and from what point the murderer fired the fatal bullet. The holes in the wall and window-casing excited a great amount of attention, as did the room where O'Neil died, the occupant of which thought it necessary to leave, in order to avoid the constant inquiries that were being made of him for details of the sad affair.

KING'S STORY.

A reporter of the TIMES had an interview with King last evening. He found the prisoner as calm and collected as if he had not committed murder. King said: "My dear Sir, as a professional man, and with all respect to the courtesy due from one professional man to another, I do not think it fair to say anything, on my own behalf, in favor of myself, until I have seen my counsel, Mr. Vanderpoel, in regard to this occurrence. But I have no objection to telling you all I know about Mr. O'Neil and the lawsuit between us. I have been married ten years, and have three children. Early last Summer I brought my wife and children to Turner's Station, and rented a cottage near the depot. I met O'Neil at the railway depot, and he assisted me in disposing of my furniture, and having it carted to my house. He was boarding in another house, but he evidently liked my table best, for, having ingratiated himself into my good opinion, he became a constant visitor at my house, and dined with me almost every evening. In July he left the village to go shooting in Pennsylvania. I came home from this city one afternoon to find my wife and children gone, and the furniture packed up. I found she had gone away with O'Neil. I at once instituted proceedings against O'Neil in the Supreme Court of Orange County, laying damages at $10,000, on a charge of crim. con. He was arrested by the Sheriff, and confined for several days before he could procure bail. At the same time I brought suit against my wife for divorce. She fled to Westchester County. There was an order issued giving the custody of the children to me, and they are now at my house, No. 140 East Seventeenth-street. I have had trouble in San Francisco, but it would not be right for me to mention it just now."

WHAT O'NEIL'S COUNSEL SAID.

Mr. Dupignac, O'Neil's counsel, came into the First Precinct Station-house, last evening, and asked Capt. Vandusen if he could remove O'Neil's body to the residence of the murdered man, at No. 50 West Thirty-second-street. A permit having been given by Coroner Keenan, Capt. Vandusen gave his consent, and O'Neil's body was taken away. Mr. Dupignac said: "I think it only my duty to tell you, Captain, that this man King is one of the vilest and most dangerous men in the City. He shot one man in San Francisco, he shot his father-in-law in the Sandwich Islands, and his whole life has been one of fraud and robbery. I saw the murder today, and I say that when the two first shots were fired, poor O'Neil turned around and said, 'That's what you're at,' and put his hand to his pistol. But before he could draw and defend himself, the third shot was fired by King, and O'Neil fell dead, shot through the lung."

Capt. Vandusen said, "You will have to appear as a witness," and Mr. Dupignac replied, "I will certainly do so."

KING'S CAREER.

From the statements of those intimate with King's career, it would appear that he first became a noted character in the city of San Francisco, where he made a living in various ways, some of them, it is said, not of the most reputable character. Becoming involved in a disturbance, he shot a man, and was obliged to leave the city. After floating around the rough mining towns of California for some time, he went to the Sandwich Islands, where he shot another man, and was again obliged to fly.

JUDGE SUTHERLAND'S STORY OF THE AFFAIR.

A reporter of the TIMES called upon ex-Judge Sutherland at his office, No. 42 Pine-street, late in the afternoon, and conversed with him regarding the tragedy. Judge Sutherland seemed much unnerved by the occurrence. He said: "I had taken no particular interest in the divorce case in which Mr. King and his wife were interested. The case came before me some time ago, on an order of reference from Judge Barrett, and at present was confined to a question regarding the custody of the children pending the suit for divorce. There had been no trouble in my office, the witnesses merely appearing before me while I took their depositions. I had noticed nothing in the actions or conversation of any of them which might foreshadow such a dreadful tragedy. This afternoon I completed the taking of the depositions, which were ready, and dismissed the parties for the day. There were three ladies in the room; one of them was Mrs. O'Neil, the wife of the murdered man, but whether Mrs. King was here I do not know. Mr. O'Neil started out of the door, and the ladies with him, as near as I can remember. They closed the door, and had left but a moment, when Mr. King took his hat and followed them. I did not notice anything at all unusual in his conduct, and he appeared to me as any one would leisurely leaving the room. But a moment intervened before three reports of a pistol followed in rapid succession. I was greatly startled, and was about to proceed to the door, when Mr. King entered and handed me a pistol, saying, 'Here, Judge.' I hardly knew what to do for a moment, but finally put the pistol in my pocket, and told him he had better sit down. I then started outside for the police, first directing several persons who were in the office, and outside of it, to see that he did not escape. I procured assistance, and returned to find the office vacant. I conjectured he might be in the room just adjoining, and tried the door to see, but found it closed. I did not know that there was a lock on it before, and tried my best to open it, but without avail. The policeman made several ineffectual efforts to open it by pushing with his shoulder, but finally forced it open with his foot. Mr. King was inside, and immediately surrendered himself. During the time that he was in the room he evinced the utmost composure, and from his appearance you would have had no idea that he was guilty of such a deed. A policeman asked me if I had seen the pistol, and taking it out of my pocket I marked it, so that I should know it again, and gave it to him. I don't know whether I did right in giving it up in that way or not, but I see no reason why I should have done differently. Three of the barrels were empty and two of them were still loaded. I do not know the make of the pistol, but it had a very bright, and I think a silvered, barrel. I am sure I should know it again from the mark I placed upon it. You can see the marks of the pistol bullets in the wall and wainscoting about the stairs. I have no idea myself as to the reason for the enmity of King to O'Neil, unless it may be for something which the latter did, or might have testified in the suit. I have not watched the case closely enough so far as to form an intelligent opinion of its merits. The case has been put down for a number of days to come upon my note-book, and the examination of witnesses had only progressed slightly. You will find all of the notes, which have already been taken, with the stenographer who has been employed in the case."

RING TRIALS.

The Tweed Case in the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The Court of Oyer and Terminer was crowded yesterday in expectation of the arraignment of William M. Tweed upon the indictments found against him in connection with the Ring robberies. At 11 o'clock Mr. Tweed, accompanied by his counsel, entered Court. After some preliminary discussion, Mr. Graham asked the District-Attorney to send for the minutes of the Court of General Sessions' Grand Jury sitting through November, December, and January last, and they would see that the list of witnesses furnished by District-Attorney Garvin was calculated to mislead them. He wished to show that John H. Keyser was not before the Grand Jury, and that he swore in this Court his bills were correct. The indictment was founded upon the falsity of his bills, when they have heard from the mouth of the man that his bills were truthful. Judge Brady said he would give the matter his personal attention and decide upon it today.

District-Attorney Sullivan moved the arraignment of Mr. Tweed, whereupon his counsel objected on the ground of not having time to look through the indictment. The matter was put over until today.

Board of County Canvassers.

The Board of County Canvassers reassembled yesterday. Supervisor Cochrane called attention to the correctness of the returns from the Third, Fourth, and Fifteenth Election Districts of the Fourth Assembly District in order to vindicate the members of the Board from any presumed imputation that they were to count in or to count out anybody; they intended to do their whole duty. The session of the Board was a lengthy one, during which the following districts were canvassed. In nearly all of them such discrepancies appeared as to call for the attendance of the inspectors. In the Ninth Assembly District the Second, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Sixteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-seventh Election Districts; in the Tenth Assembly District, the Fourth, Fifth, Tenth, Eleventh, Fifteenth, Eighteenth, and Nineteenth Election Districts; in the Eleventh Assembly District, the Fourth, Sixth, Ninth, Tenth, Fourteenth, Nineteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth, and Thirtieth Election Districts; in the Twelfth Assembly District, the Fourth, Fifth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Twelfth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Election Districts. In the centre of the hall a pretty floral temple has been erected, and will be presided over by Mrs. Dewitt Hayes; at the further end of the hall, where the platform usually stands, is an evergreen arbor, inclosing a lemonade fountain, very prettily constructed of imitation rock-work. A refreshment department forms a feature of the Fair, and various amusements, including the popular Punch and Judy entertainment, are provided for boys and girls of all ages. The general arrangements are under the management of Mrs. Jacob Hayes and a committee of ladies from the several churches represented.
